Nescire autem quid ante quam natus sis acciderit, id est semper esse puerum.

Not to know what happened before one was born, is always to be a child.

a. Cicero.

Nec scire fas est omnia.

One cannot know everything.

b. Horace.

Serviet eternum qui parvo nesciet uti.

He will always be a slave, who does not know how to live upon a little.

c. Horace.

Si quid novisti rectius istis
Candidus imperti, si non, his utere mecum.

If you know anything better than this candidly impart it; if not, use this with me.

d. Horace.

Scire volunt omnes, mercedem solvere nemo.

All desire knowledge, but no one is willing to pay the price.

e. Juvenal.

Et teneo melius ista quam meum nomen.

I know all that better than my own name.

f. Martial.

Intus et in cute novi hominem,

I know the man within and without.

g. Persius.

Usque adeone
Scire tuum nihil est nisi te scire hoc, sciat alter?

Is therefore your knowledge to pass for nothing unless others know that you possess it?

h. Persius.

Plus scire satius est, quam loqui.

It is well for one to know more than he says.

i. Plautus.

Cogi qui potest, nescit mori.

He who can be forced (to act against his will), does not know how to die.

j. Seneca.

L.

LABOR.

Arbores serit diligens agricola, quarum adspiciet baccam ipse numquam,

The diligent farmer plants trees, of which he himself will never see the fruit.

k. Cicero.

Jucundi acti labores.

Labors passed are pleasant.

l. Cicero.

Nil sine magno
Vita labore dedit mortalibus.

Life gives nothing to men without great labor.

m. Horace.

Qui cupit optatam cursu contingere metam
Multa tulit fecitque puer, sudavit et alsit.

He who would reach the desired goal must, while a boy, suffer and labor much and bear both heat and cold.

n. Horace.

Nil actum reputans, si quid superesset agendum.

Thinking that nothing was done, if any thing remained to do.

o. Lucan.

Labor est etiam ipsa voluptas.

Labor is itself a pleasure.

p. Lucretius.

Stultus labor est ineptiarum.

Labor bestowed on trifles is silly.

q. Martial.

Dum vires annique sinunt, tolerate labores.
Jam veniet tacito curva senecta pede.

While strength and years permit, endure labor: soon bent old age will come with silent foot.

r. Ovid.

Facilis descensus averni;
Sed revocare gradum, superasque evadere ad auras,
Hic labor, hoc opus est.

The descent into hell is easy, but to recall your steps, and re-ascend to the upper air, this is labor, this is work.

s. Virgil.

Labor omnia vincit.

Labor conquers everything.

t. Virgil.

LANDSCAPE.

Nunc omnis ager, nunc omnis parturit arbos,
Nunc frondent sylvæ, nunc formosissimus annus.

Now every field and every tree is in bloom. The woods are in full leaf, and the year in its highest beauty.

u. Virgil.

LAUGHTER.

Quid rides?
Mutato nomine de te fabula narratur.

Why do you laugh? Change but the name, and the story is told of yourself.
a. HORACE.

Citharœdus
Ridetur chordâ qui semper oberrat eâdem.

The musician who always plays on the same string, is laughed at.
b. HORACE.

Risu inepto res ineptior nulla est.

Nothing is more silly than silly laughter.
c. MARTIAL.

Nimium risus pretium est, si probitatis impendio constat.

A laugh costs too much when bought at the expense of virtue.
d. QUINTILIAN.

LAW.

Quid leges sine moribus
Vanæ proficiunt?

Of what use are laws, inoperative through public immorality?
e. HORACE.

Nulla fere causa est in quâ non femina litem Moverit.

There is scarcely a law-suit unless a woman is the cause of it.
f. JUVENAL.

Nulla manus belli, mutato judice, pura est.

Neither side is guiltless, if its adversary is appointed judge.
g. LUCAN.

Certis * * * * legibus omnia parent.

All things obey fixed laws.
h. LUCRETIUS.

Sunt superis sua jura.

The gods have their own laws.
i. OVID.

Nescis tu quam meticulosa res sit ire ad judicem.

You little know what a ticklish thing it is to go to law.
j. PLAUTUS.

Jus summum sæpe summa est malitia.

The strictest law sometimes becomes the severest injustice.
k. TERENCE.

Quod vos jus cogit, id voluntate impetret.

What the law insists upon, let it have of your own free will.
l. TERENCE.

LEARNING.

Nosse velint omnes, mercedem solvere nemo.

All wish to be learned, but no one is willing to pay the price.
m. JUVENAL.

Homo doctus in se semper divitias habet.

The learned man always has riches in himself.
n. PHÆDRUS.

Dediscit animus sero quod didicit diu.

The mind unlearns with difficulty what it was long in learning.
o. SENECA.

Homines, dum docent, discunt.

Men learn while they teach.
p. SENECA.

Nunquam nimis dicitur, quod nunquam satis discitur.

That is never too often said which is never sufficiently learned.
q. SENECA.

Bonum est fugienda aspicere in alieno malo.

It is well to learn from the misfortunes of others what should be avoided.
r. SYRUS.

Discipulus est priori posterior dies.

Each day is the scholar of yesterday.
s. SYRUS.

LIBERTY.

Rarâ temporum felicitate, ubi sentire quæ velis, et quæ sentias dicere licet.

Such being the happiness of the times, that you may think as you wish, and speak as you think.
t. TACITUS.

LICENSE.

Pictoribus atque poetis
Quidlibet audendi semper fuit æque potestas.

Painters and poets have equal license in regard to every thing.
u. HORACE.

Quicquid multis peccatur, inultum est.

All go free when multitudes offend.
v. LUCAN.

Deteriores omnes sumus licentiâ.

We are all worse for license.
w. TERENCE.

LIFE.

Qui nunc it per iter tenebricosum,
Illuc, unde negant redire quemquam.

He is now travelling the darksome path to that land from which, they say, no one ever returns.
x. CATULLUS.

Brevis a naturâ nobis vita data est; at memoria bene reditæ vitæ sempiterna.

The life given us by nature is short; but the memory of a well-spent life is eternal.

a. CICERO.

Esse oportet ut vivas, non vivere ut edas.

Thou should'st eat to live; not live to eat.

b. CICERO.

Natura dedit usuram vitæ tanquam pecuniæ, nullâ præstitutâ die.

Nature has lent us life at interest, like money, and has fixed no day for its payment.

c. CICERO.

Nemo parum diu vixit, qui virtutis perfectæ perfecto functus est munere.

No one has lived a short life who has performed its duties with unblemished character.

d. CICERO.

Quoniam diu vixisse denegatur, aliquid faciamus quo possimus ostendere nos vixisse.

Since long life is denied us, we should do something to show that we have lived.

e. CICERO.

Vivimus exiguo melius, natura beatis
Omnibus esse dedit, si quis cognoverit uti.

Men live best upon a little; nature has given to all the privilege of being happy, if they but knew how to use her gifts.

f. CLAUDIANUS.

Vitâ cedat uti conviva satur.

Let him take leave of life, like a satiated guest.

g. HORACE.

Vitæ summa brevis spem nos vetat inchoare longam.

The short space of life forbids us to lay plans requiring a long time for their accomplishment.

h. HORACE.

Vivendi recte qui prorogat horam
Rusticus expectat dum defluat amnis; at ille
Labitur et labetur in omne volubilis ævum.

He who postpones the hour of living as he ought, is like the rustic who waits for the river to pass along (before he crosses); but it glides on and will glide on forever.

i. HORACE.

Vitaque mancipio nulli datur, omnibus usu.

Life is given to no one for a lasting possession, to all for use.

j. LUCRETIUS.

Hoc est vivere bis
Vitâ posse priori frui.

It is to live twice when you can enjoy (the recollection of) your former life.

k. MARTIAL.

Non est vivere, sed valere vita.

Life is not mere living, but the enjoyment of health.

l. MARTIAL.

Id quoque, quod vivam, munus habere dei.

This also, that I live, I consider a gift of God.

m. OVID.

Vive sine invidiâ mollesque inglorios annos
Exige, et amicitias tibi junge pares.

Live without envy, pray for placid and inglorious years, and form friendships with your equals.

n. OVID.

Vita ipsa quâ fruimur brevis est.

The very life which we enjoy is short.

o. SALLUST.

Ante senectutem curavi ut bene viverem, in senectute (curo) ut bene moriar; bene autem mori est libenter mori.

Before old age I took care to live well; in old age I take care to die well; but to die well is to die willingly.

p. SENECA.

Atqui vivere, militare est.

But life is a warfare.

q. SENECA.

Elige eum, cujus tibi placuit et vita et oratio.

Choose that man whose life, as well as eloquence, you can approve.

r. SENECA.

Exigua pars est vitæ quam nos vivimus.

The part of life which we really like, is short.

s. SENECA.

Non domus hoc corpus sed hospitium et quidem breve.

This body is not a home, but an inn; and that only for a short time.

t. SENECA.

Non est ut diu vivamus curandum est, sed ut satis.

Our care should be not to live long, but to live enough.

u. SENECA.

Non vivere bonum est, sed bene vivere.

To live is not a blessing, but to live well.

v. SENECA.

Prima quæ vitam dedit hora, carpit.

The hour which gives us life, begins to take it away.

w. SENECA.

Propera vivere et singulos dies singulas vitas puta.

Make haste to live, and consider each day a life.

x. SENECA.

Rebus parvis alta præstatur quies.

In humble life there is great repose.

a. SENECA.

Si ad naturam vivas, nunquam eris pauper; si ad opinionem, numquam dives.

If you live according to nature, you never will be poor; if, according to the world's caprice, you will never be rich.

b. SENECA.

Qui mente novissimus exit
Lucis amor.

The love of life, the last that lingers in the mind.

c. STATIUS.

O vita misero longa! felici brevis!

O life! long to the wretched, short to the happy.

d. SYRUS.

Pater ipse colendi
Haud facilem esse viam voluit, primusque per artem
Movit agros, curis acuens mortalia corda.

The father himself did not wish the farmer's life to be easy; he was the first to cultivate the soil by art, inciting the human heart by anxiety.

e. VIRGIL.

LOSS.

Periere mores, jus, decus, pietas, fides,
Et qui redire nescit, cum perit, pudor.

We have lost morals, justice, honor, piety and faith, and that sense of shame which, once lost, can never be restored.

f. SENECA.

LOVE.

Quis legem det amantibus?
Major lex amor est sibi.

What law can bind lovers? Love is their supreme law.

g. BOETHIUS.

Difficile est longum subito deponere amorem.

It is difficult at once to relinquish a long cherished love.

h. CATULLUS.

Mulier cupido quod dicit amanti,
In vento et rapidâ scribere oportet aquâ.

What woman says to her fond lover, should be written on air or the swift water.

i. CATULLUS.

Nihilo sese plus quam alterum homo diligat.

Let man not love himself more than his neighbor.

j. CICERO.

Felices ter et amplius
Quos irrupta tenet copula, nec malis
Divulsus querimoniis
Supremâ citius solvet amor die.

Happy and thrice happy are they who enjoy an uninterrupted union, and whose love, unbroken by any complaints shall not dissolve until the last day.

k. HORACE.

Si sine amore, jocisque
Nil est jucundum, vivas in amore jocisque.

If nothing is delightful without love and jokes, then live in love and jokes.

l. HORACE.

Amare et sapere vix deo conceditur.

To love and to be wise is scarcely granted to a god.

m. LABERIUS.

Non amo te, Sabidi, nec possum dicere quare;
Hoc tantum posse dicere: non amo te.

I do not love thee, Sabidius, nor can I say why; I can only say this, "I do not love thee."

n. MARTIAL.

Credula res amor est.

Love is a credulous thing.

o. OVID.

Hei mihi! quod nullis amor est medicabilis herbis.

Ah me! love cannot be cured by herbs.

p. OVID.

Meminerunt omnia amantes.

Lovers remember everything.

q. OVID.

Militat omnis amasius.

Every lover is a soldier.

r. OVID.

Moribus et formâ conciliandus amor.

Love must be attracted by beauty of mind and body.

s. OVID.

Non bene conveniunt, nec in uno sede morantur,
Majestas et amor.

Majesty and love do not well agree, nor do they live together.

t. OVID.

Otia si tollas, periere
Cupidinis arcus.

If you give up your quiet life, the bow of Cupid will lose its power.

u. OVID.

Qui finem quæris amoris,
(Credit amor rebus) res age; tutus eris.

If thou wishest to put an end to love, attend to business (love yields to employment;) then thou wilt be safe.

v. OVID.

Qui non vult fieri desidiosus, amet.

Let the man who does not wish to be idle, fall in love.

a. Ovid.

Quicquid Amor jussit non est contemnere tutum.
Regnat, et in dominos jus habet ille deos.

It is not safe to despise what Love commands. He reigns supreme, and rules the mighty gods.

b. Ovid.

Res est soliciti plena timoris amor.

Love is a thing full of anxious fears.

c. Ovid.

Ut ameris, amabilis esto.

To be loved, be lovable.

d. Ovid.

Vanescitque absens, et novus intrat amor.

Absent love vanishes and a new one takes its place.

e. Ovid.

Amor et melle et felle est fecundissimus.

Love abounds in honey and poison.

f. Plautus.

Auro contra cedo modestum amatorem.

Find me a reasonable lover against his weight in gold.

g. Plautus.

Bonum est, pauxillum amare sane; insane non bonum est.

It is good to love moderately; immoderately, it is not good.

h. Plautus.

Qui in amore præcipitavit pejus perit, quam si saxo saliat.

He who falls in love meets a worse fate than he who leaps from a rock.

i. Plautus.

Scilicet insano nemo in amore videt.

Everybody in love is blind.

j. Propertius.

Amor timere neminem verus potest.

True love can fear no one.

k. Seneca.

Non potest amor cum timore misceri;

Love cannot be mixed with fear.

l. Seneca.

Nulla vis major pietate verâ est.

No power is greater than true affection (for parents).

m. Seneca.

Odit verus amor nec patitur moras.

True love hates and will not bear delay.

n. Seneca.

Qui amicus est amat, qui amat non utique amicus est. Itaque, amicitia semper prodest: amor etiam aliquando nocet.

He who is a friend must love; but he who loves is not therefore a friend. Friendship, consequently, always profits; love sometimes does harm.

o. Seneca.

Si vis amari, ama.

If you wish to be loved, love.

p. Seneca.

Amor animi arbitrio sumitur, non ponitur.

Love is in our power, but not to lay it aside.

q. Syrus.

Cogas amantem irasci, amare si velis,

You must make a lover angry if you wish him to love.

r. Syrus.

Pessimum veri affectus venenum sua cuique utilitas.

Self-interest is the bane of all true affection.

s. Tacitus.

Amantium iræ amoris integratio est.

Quarrels of lovers renew their love.

t. Terence.

Omnia vincit amor, et nos cedamus amori.

Love conquers all things; let us yield to love.

u. Virgil.

Quis fallere possit amantem?

Who can deceive a lover?

v. Virgil.

Vulnus alit venis, et cæca carpitur igni.

She nourishes the poison in her veins, and is consumed by the hidden fire.

w. Virgil.

LUCK.

Felix ille tamen corvo quoque rarior albo.

A lucky man is rarer than a white crow.

x. Juvenal.

Insperata accidunt magis sæpe quam quæ speres.

Things unhoped for happen oftener than things we desire.

y. Plautus.

LUXURY.

Nunc patimur longæ pacis mala; sævior armis Luxuria incubuit, victumque ulciscitur orbem.

Now we are suffering the evils of a long peace. Luxury, more destructive than war, has engrossed us, and avenges the vanquished world.

z. Juvenal.

M.

MAN.

Homo ad duas res, ad intelligendum et ad agendum, est natus.

Man was born for two things—thinking and acting.

a. CICERO.

Homo homini aut deus aut lupus.

Man is to man either a god or a wolf.

b. ERASMUS.

Metiri se quemque suo modulo ac pede æquum est.

Every man should measure himself by his own standard.

c. HORACE.

Os homini sublime dedit cœlumque tueri.

God gave man an upright countenance to survey the heavens.

d. HORACE.

Consilia res magis dant hominibus quam homines rebus.

Men's plans should be regulated by the circumstances, not circumstances by the plans.

e. LIVY.

Hominem pagina nostra sapit.

Our page relates to man.

f. MARTIAL.

Mille hominum species et rerum discolor usus;
Velle suum cuique est nec voto vivitur uno.

There are a thousand kinds of men, and their sense of things is various: each has his own inclination, nor do all live for the same object.

g. PERSIUS.

Homo vitæ commodatus, non donatus est.

Man has been lent, not given, to life.

h. SYRUS.

Homo sum, et humani a me nil alienum puto.

I am a man, and nothing which relates to man can be a matter of unconcern to me.

i. TERENCE.

Ut homo est, ita morem geras.

As the man is, so should you conduct yourself.

j. TERENCE.

MANNERS.

Pulcrum ornatum turpes mores pejus cœno collinunt,
Lepidi mores turpem ornatum facile factis comprobant.

Evil manners soil a fine dress more than mud; good manners, by their deeds, easily adorn a humble garb.

k. PLAUTUS.

Quæ fuerant vitia mores sunt.

What once were vices, are now the manners of the day.

l. SENECA.

Obsequium amicos, veritas odium parit.

Obsequiousness begets friends; truth, hatred.

m. TERENCE.

MARRIAGE.

Prima societas in ipso conjugio est: proxima in liberis; deinde una domus, communia omnia.

The first bond of society is marriage; the next, our children; then the whole family, and all things in common.

n. CICERO.

Si qua voles apte nubere, nube pari.

If thou wouldst marry wisely, marry thy equal.

o. OVID.

Non id videndum, conjugum ut bonis bona
At ut ingenium congruat et mores moribus;
Probitas, pudorque virgini dos optima est.

In marriage the relative proportion of property is not so much to be considered, as the union of mind and similarity of disposition. Chastity and modesty form the best dowry of a virgin.

p. TERENCE.

MEDICINE.

Ægri quia non omnes convalescunt, idcirco ars nulla medicina est.

Because all the sick do not recover, therefore medicine is not an art.

q. CICERO.

Vulnera nisi tacta tractataque sanari non possunt.

Wounds cannot be cured unless they are probed.

r. LIVY.

Aëre non certo corpora languor habet.

Sickness seizes the body from bad ventilation.

a. Ovid.

Corpora vix ferro quædam sanantur acuto!
Auxilium multis succus et herba fuit.

Some bodies are scarcely healed by the knife; many are healed by potions and herbs.

b. Ovid.

Dulcia non ferimus; succo renovamus amaro.

We do not bear sweets; we are recruited by a bitter potion.

c. Ovid.

Tempore ducetur longo fortasse cicatrix,
Horrent admotas vulnera cruda manus.

The wound will perhaps be cured in the process of time, but it shrinks from the touch while it is fresh.

d. Ovid.

Medicus nihil aliud est quam animi consolatio.

A physician is nothing but a consoler of the mind.

e. Petronius Arbiter.

Pars sanitatis velle sanari fuit.

It is part of the cure to wish to be cured.

f. Seneca.

Crudelem medicum intemperans æger facit.

A disorderly patient makes the physician cruel.

g. Syrus.

Graviora quædam sunt remedia periculis.

Some remedies are worse than the disease.

h. Syrus.

Ægrescitque medendo.

The medicine increases the disease.

i. Virgil.

MEMORY.

Memoria est thesaurus ominum rerum et custos.

Memory is the treasury and guardian of all things.

j. Cicero.

Vita enim mortuorum in memoriâ vivorum est posita.

The life of the dead is placed in the memory of the living.

k. Cicero.

Patriâ quis exul se quoque fugit.

What exile from his country is able to escape from himself?

l. Horace.

At cum longa dies sedavit vulnera mentis,
Intempestive qui fovet illa novat.

When time has assuaged the wounds of the mind, he who unseasonably reminds us of them, opens them afresh.

m. Ovid.

Parsque est meminisse doloris.

A part of the pain is memory.

n. Ovid.

Impensa monumenti supervacua est: memoria nostra durabit, si vitâ meruimus.

The erection of a monument is superfluous; the memory of us will last, if we have deserved it in our lives.

o. Pliny the Younger.

Facetiarum apud præpotentes in longum memoria est.

The powerful hold in deep remembrance an ill-timed pleasantry.

p. Tacitus.

Forsan et hæc olim meminisse juvabit;
Durate et rebus vosmet servate secundis.

Perhaps the remembrance of these things will prove a source of future pleasure.
(Be of stout heart, and preserve yourselves for better times.)

q. Virgil.

Quique sui memores alios fecêre merendo.

These who have ensured their remembrance by their deserts.

r. Virgil.

Si genus humanum et mortalia temnitis arma,
At sperate Deos memores fandi atque nefandi.

If ye despise the human race, and mortal arms, yet remember that there is a God who is mindful of right and wrong.

s. Virgil.

MERCY.

Mortem misericors sæpe pro vitâ dabit.

Mercy often inflicts death.

t. Seneca.

Pulchrum est vitam donare minori.

It is noble to grant life to the vanquished.

u. Statius.

MERIT.

Virtute ambire oportet, non favitoribus.
Sat habet favitorum semper, qui recte facit.

We should try to succeed by merit, not by favor. He who does well will always have patrons enough.

v. Plautus.

MIND.

Frons est animi janua.

The forehead is the gate of the mind.

w. Cicero.

In animo perturbato, sicut in corpore, sanitas esse non potest.

In a disturbed mind, as in a body in the same state, health cannot exist.

a. CICERO.

Morbi perniciores pluresque animi quam corporis.

The diseases of the mind are more and more destructive than those of the body.

b. CICERO.

Acclinis falsis animus meliora recusat.

A mind that is charmed by false appearances refuses better things.

c. HORACE.

Omne supervacuum pleno de pectore manat.

Superfluous advice is not retained by the full mind.

d. HORACE.

Quæ lædunt oculum festinas demere; si quid
Est animum, differs curandi tempus in annum.

If anything affects your eye, you hasten to have it removed; if anything affects your mind, you postpone the cure for a year.

e. HORACE.

Cum corpore mentem
Crescere sentimus pariterque senescere.

We plainly perceive that the mind strengthens and decays with the body.

f. LUCRETIUS.

Corpore sed mens est ægro magis ægra; malique
In circumspectu stat sine fine sui.

The mind is sicker than the sick body; in contemplation of its sufferings it becomes hopeless.

g. OVID.

Mensque pati durum sustinet ægra nihil.

The sick mind cannot bear anything harsh.

h. OVID.

Mens sola loco non exulat.

The mind alone cannot be exiled.

i. OVID.

Vitiant artus ægræ contagia mentis.

Diseases of the mind impair the bodily powers.

j. OVID.

Animus quod perdidit optat,
Atque in præteritâ se totus imagine versat.

The mind wishes for what it has missed, and occupies itself with retrospective contemplation.

k. PETRONIUS ARBITER.

Animus æquus optimum est ærumnæ condimentum.

A well-balanced mind is the best remedy against affliction.

Habet cerebrum sensus arcem; hic mentis est regimen.

The brain is the citadel of the senses: this guides the principle of thought.

m. PLINY THE ELDER.

MISFORTUNE.

Nil habet infelix paupertas durius in se
Quam quod ridiculos homines facit.

Cheerless poverty has no harder trial than this, that it makes men the subject of ridicule.

n. JUVENAL.

Adversæ res admonent religionum.

Adversity reminds men of religion.

o. LIVY.

Væ victis!

Woe to the vanquished.

p. LIVY.

Non est paupertas, Nestor, habere nihil.

To have nothing is not poverty.

q. MARTIAL.

Rebus in angustis facile est contemnere vitam;
Fortiter ille facit qui miser esse potest.

In adversity it is easy to despise life; he is truly brave who can endure a wretched life.

r. MARTIAL.

Horrea formicæ tendunt ad inania nunquam,
Nullus ad amissas ibit amicus opes.

Ants do not bend their ways to empty barns, so no friend will visit the place of departed wealth.

s. OVID.

Quem si non tenuit magnis tamen excidit ausis.

If he did not succeed, he at least failed in a glorious undertaking.

t. OVID.

Quicumque amisit dignitatem pristinam
Ignavis etiam jocus est in casu gravi.

Whoever has fallen from his former high estate is in his calamity the scorn even of the base.

u. PHÆDRUS.

Calamitas virtutis occasio est.

Calamity is virtue's opportunity.

v. SENECA.

Viri infelices, procul amici.

When men are unfortunate, their friends are distant.

w. SENECA.

Bonum est fugienda adspicere in alieno malo.

It is good to see in the misfortunes of others what we should avoid.

x. SYRUS.

MODESTY.

Maximum ornamentum amicitiæ tollit, qui ex eâ tollit verecundiam.

He takes the greatest ornament from friendship, who takes modesty from it.

a. CICERO.

Adolescentem verecundum esse decet.

Modesty becomes a young man.

b. PLAUTUS.

Modestè tamen et circumspecto judicio de tantis viris pronunciandum est, ne quod plurisque accidit, damnent quæ non intelligunt.

We should speak modestly and circumspectly of such great men, lest we should fall into the faults of many, who condemn what they do not understand.

c. QUINTILIAN.

Saltabat melius quam necesse est probæ.

She danced much better than became a modest woman.

d. SALLUST.

Nemo beneficia in calendario scribit.

Nobody makes an entry of his good deeds in his day-book.

e. SENECA.

Redire cum perit nescit pudor.

When modesty is once extinguished, it knows not a return.

f. SENECA.

Erubuit: salva res est.

He blushes: all is safe.

g. TERENCE.

MONEY.

Nec quicquam acrius quam pecuniæ damnum stimulat.

Nothing stings more deeply than the loss of money.

h. LIVY.

Pecuniam in loco negligere maximum est lucrum.

To dispise money on some occasions is a very great gain.

i. TERENCE.

MONUMENT.

Exegi monumentum ære perennius.

I have erected a monument more lasting than brass.

j. HORACE.

MOURNING.

Si vis me flere, dolendum est
Primum ipsi tibi.

If you wish me to weep, you must mourn first yourself.

k. HORACE.

MUSIC.

Id haud paullo est verius quam quod Platoni nostro placet qui, musicorum cantibus, ait, mutatis mutari civitatum status.

This saying is much more certain than that of Plato who says that a change in the songs of musicians can change the state of commonwealths.

Vixere fortes ante Agamemnona
Multi: sed omnes illacrymabiles
Urgentur, ignotique longâ
Nocte, carent quia vate sacro.

Many heroes lived before Agamemnon, but they are all unmourned, and consigned to oblivion, because they had no bard to sing their praises.

m. HORACE.

Etiam singulorum fatigatio quamlibet se rudi modulatione solatur.

Men, even when alone, lighten their labors by song, however rude it may be.

n. QUINTILIAN.

N.

NATURE.

Meliora sunt ea quæ naturâ quam illa quæ arte perfecta sunt.

Things perfected by nature are better than those finished by art.

o. CICERO.

Naturam expellas furcâ, tamen usque recurrit.

You may turn nature out of doors with violence, but she will still return.

p. HORACE.

Natura vero nihil hominibus brevitate vitæ præstitit melius.

Nature has given man no better thing than shortness of life.

q. PLINY THE ELDER.

Ut natura dedit, sic omnis recta figura.

Every form as nature made it, is correct.

r. PROPERTIUS.

Natura semina scientiæ nobis dedit, scientiam non dedit.

Nature has given us the seeds of knowledge, not knowledge itself.

s. SENECA.

Is enim est eloquens, qui et humilia subtiliter, et magna graviter, et mediocria temperate potest dicere.

He is the eloquent man who can treat humble subjects with delicacy, lofty things impressively, and moderate things temperately.
p. Cicero.

Intererit multum Davusne loquatur an heros.

It makes a great difference whether Davus or a hero speaks.
q. Horace.

Oratorem autem instituimus illum perfectum, qui esse nisi vir bonus non potest.

According to my definition no man can be a perfect orator, unless he is a good man.
r. Quintilian.

ORDER.

Nihil ordinatum est, quod præcipitatur et properat.

Nothing is well-ordered that is hasty and precipitate.
s. Seneca.

OVERSIGHT.

Multorum te etiam oculi et aures non sentientem, sicuti adhuc fecerunt, speculabuntur atque custodient.

Without your knowledge, the eyes and ears of many will see and watch you, as they have done already.
t. Cicero.

P.

PAIN.

Quid te exempla juvat spinis è pluribus una.

What does it avail you, if of many thorns only one be removed?

a. JUVENAL.

PARTIALITY.

Deos fortioribus adesse.

The gods are on the side of the stronger.

b. TACITUS.

PATIENCE.

Durum! sed levius fit patientiâ
Quicquid corrigere est nefas.

It is hard! But what cannot be removed, becomes lighter through patience.

c. HORACE.

Æquo animo pœnam, qui meruere, ferant.

Let those who have deserved their punishment, bear it patiently.

d. OVID.

Sua quisque exempla debet æquo animo pati.

Every one ought to bear patiently the results of his own conduct.

e. PHÆDRUS.

Nihil tam acerbum est in quo non æquus animus solatium inveniat.

There is nothing so disagreeable, that a patient mind cannot find some solace for it.

f. SENECA.

Nec tamen fugisse cavendo
Adversa egregium, quam perdomuisse ferendo.

To avoid misfortunes by our watchfulness, is not so noble as to overcome them by patience.

g. SILIUS ITALICUS.

Durate, et vosmet rebus servate secundis.

Persevere and preserve yourselves for better circumstances.

h. VIRGIL.

Superanda omnis fortuna ferendo est.

Every misfortune is to be subdued by patience.

i. VIRGIL.

PATRIOTISM.

Cum tempus necessitasque postulat, decertandum manu est, et mors servituti turpidinique anteponenda.

When time and need require, we should resist with all our might, and prefer death to slavery and disgrace.

j. CICERO.

Nihil ex omnibus rebus humanis est præclarius aut præstantius quam de republicâ bene mereri.

Of all human things nothing is more honorable or more excellent than to deserve well of one's country.

k. CICERO.

O fortunata mors quæ, naturæ debita, pro patriâ potissimum redita!

O happy death, which though due to nature is most nobly given for our country.

l. CICERO.

Patria est communis omnium parens.

Our country is the common parent of all.

m. CICERO.

Dulce et decorum est pro patriâ mori.

It is sweet and glorious to die for one's country.

n. HORACE.

Non ille pro charis amicis
Aut patriâ timidus perire.

He dares for his country or his friends to die.

o. HORACE.

Nullum est imperium tutum nisi benevolentiâ munitum.

No government is safe unless protected by the good-will of the people.

p. NEPOS.

Amor patriæ ratione valentior.

The love of country is more powerful than reason itself.

q. OVID.

Nescio quâ natale solum dulcedine captos
Ducit, et immemores non sinit esse sui.

Our native land charms us with inexpressible sweetness, and never allows us to forget that we belong to it.

r. OVID.

Patria est ubicumque vir fortis sedem elegerit.

A brave man's country is wherever he chooses his abode.

s. QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS.

Non exercitus, neque thesauri, præsidia regni sunt, verum amici.

The safety of a kingdom is not its armies, nor its treasures, but its friends.

t. SALLUST.

Præferre patriam liberis regem decet.

A king should prefer his country to his children.

u. SENECA.

Servare cives, major est virtus patriæ patri.

To preserve the life of citizens, is the greatest virtue in the father of his country.

a. SENECA.

Non missura cutem nisi plena cruoris hirudo.

A leech does not quit the skin until it is full of blood.

l. HORACE.

PERSPICUITY.

Perspicuitas enim argumentatione elevatur.

Clearness is often obscured by discussion.

m. CICERO.

PHILOSOPHY.

Fuge magna, licet sub paupere tecto
Reges et regum vitâ præcurrere amicos.

Avoid greatness; in a cottage there may be more real happiness, than kings or their favorites enjoy.

n. HORACE.

Quod satis est cui contigit, nihil amplius optet.

Let him who has enough ask for nothing more.

o. HORACE.

Quo me cumque rapit tempestas deferor hospes.

Wherever the storm carries me, I go a willing guest.

p. HORACE.

Sperne voluptates; nocet empta dolore voluptas.

Despise pleasures; pleasures bought by pain is injurious.

q. HORACE.

Vivo et regno, simul ista reliqui
Quæ vos ad cælum fertis rumore secundo.

I live and am like a king, since I have abandoned those pleasures which you by your praises extol to the skies.

r. HORACE.

Quod sit esse velit, nihilque malit.

He is willing to be what he is, and sees nothing preferable.

s. MARTIAL.

Habeas ut nactus: nota mala res optima est.

Keep what you have got; the known evil is best.

t. PLAUTUS.

Philosophia stemma non inspicit. Platonem non accipit nobilem philosophia, sed fecit.

Philosophy does not look into pedigree. She did not receive Plato as noble, but she made him such.

u. SENECA.

Injuriarum remedium est oblivio.

The remedy for wrongs is to forget them.

v. SYRUS.

Etiam quæ sibi quisque timebat
Unius in miseri exitium conversa tulere.

What each man feared would happen to himself, did not trouble him when he saw that it would ruin another.

w. VIRGIL.

PLACE.

Mitius exilium faciunt loca.

The place makes the banishment more bearable.

x. OVID.

PLEASURE.

Quod licet ingratum est; quod non licet acrius urit.

What is lawful is undesirable; what is unlawful is very attractive.

c. TACITUS.

PLIABILITY.

Argillâ quidvis imitaberis udâ.

Thou canst mould him into any shape like soft clay.

d. HORACE.

Turpe est aliud loqui, aliud sentire : quanto turpius aliud scribere, aliud sentire.

It is dishonorable to say one thing and think another; how much more dishonorable to write one thing and think another.

e. SENECA.

POETRY.

Semper enim audivi poetam bonum neminem sine inflammatione animorum existere posse, et sine quodam afflatu quasi furoris.

I have always heard that no true poet can exist without the spirit being on fire, and without, as it were, an inspiration of passion.

f. CICERO.

Nonumque prematur in annum.

Let your poem be kept nine years.

g. HORACE.

Non satis est pulchra esse poemata, dulcia sunto.

It is not enough that poetry is agreeable. it should also be interesting.

h. HORACE.

Verum ubi plura nitent in carmine, non ego paucis
Offendar maculis.

But if there are many brilliancies in the poem, a few faults will not trouble me.

i. HORACE.

Versus inopes rerum, nugæque canoræ.

Verses devoid of substance, melodious trifles.

j. HORACE.

Tale tuum carmen nobis, divine poeta,
Quale sopor fessis.

Thy verses are as pleasing to me, O divine poet, as sleep is to the wearied.

k. VIRGIL.

POETS.

Adhuc neminem cognovi poetam, qui sibi non optimus videretur.

I have never yet known a poet who did not think himself super-excellent.

In the struggle between those seeking power there is no middle course.

n. TACITUS.

Imperium flagitio acquisitum nemo unquam bonis artibus exercuit.

Power acquired by guilt was never used for a good purpose.

o. TACITUS.

Potentiam cautis quam acribus consiliis tutius haberi.

Power is more safely retained by cautious than by severe councils.

p. TACITUS.

Suspectum semper invisumque dominantibus qui proximus destinaretur.

Rulers always hate and suspect the next in succession.

q. TACITUS.

Flectere si nequeo superos, Acheronta movebo.

If I cannot influence the gods, I shall move all hell.

r. VIRGIL.

PRAISE.

Trahimur omnes laudis studio, et optimus quisque maxime gloriâ ducitur.

We are all excited by the love of praise, and the noblest are most influenced by glory.

s. CICERO.

Principibus placuisse viris non ultima laus est.

To please great men is not the last degree of praise.

t. HORACE.

Id facere laus est quod decet, non quod licet.

He deserves praise who does not what he may, but what he ought.

u. SENECA.

Tacent, satis laudant.

Their silence is sufficient praise.

v. TERENCE.

PRAYER.

Orandum est ut sit mens sana in corpore sano.

Our prayers should be for a sound mind in a healthy body.

w. JUVENAL.

PREFERENCE.

Verum illud est vulgo quod dici solet;
Omnes sibi malle melius esse quam alteri.

The common saying is true, that we all would rather have matters go well with ourselves than with others.
a. TERENCE.

PREJUDICE.

Vulgus ex veritate pauca, ex opinione muta æstimat.

The rabble estimate few things according to their real value, most things according to their prejudices.
b. CICERO.

Tantum religio potuit suadere malorum.

So much evil was bigotry able to accomplish.
c. LUCRETIUS.

PREPARATION.

In omnibus negotiis prius quam aggrediare, adhibenda est præparatio diligens.

In all matters, before beginning, a diligent preparation should be made.
d. CICERO.

Sperat infestis, metuit secundis
Alteram sortem, bene preparatum Pectus.

A well prepared mind hopes in adversity and fears in prosperity.
e. HORACE.

PRIDE.

Inquinat egregios adjuncta superbia mores.

The noblest character is stained by the addition of pride.
f. CLAUDIANUS.

Quid prodest, Pontice, longo
Sanguine censeri, pictosque ostendere vultus Majorum.

Of what advantage is it to you, Ponticus, to quote your remote ancestors, and to exhibit their portraits?
g. JUVENAL.

PROOF.

Pluris est oculatus testis unus, quam auriti decem.
Qui audiunt, audita dicunt; qui vident, plane sciunt.

One eye witness is of more weight than ten hear-says. Those who hear, speak of what they have heard; those who see, know beyond mistake.
h. PLAUTUS.

PROPHECY.

Bene qui conjiciet, vatem hunc perhibebo optimum.

I shall always consider the best guesser the best prophet.
i. CICERO.

PROPRIETY.

Quod est, eo decet uti: et quicquid agas, agere pro viribus.

What one has, one ought to use: and whatever he does he should do with all his might.
j. CICERO.

Munditiis capimur: non sine lege capilli.

We are charmed by neatness of person; let not thy hair be out of order.
k. OVID.

Nam genus et proavus et quæ non fecimus ipsi
Vix ea nostra voco.

Birth and ancestry, and that which we have not ourselves achieved, we can scarcely call our own.
l. OVID.

PROSPERITY.

In rebus prosperis, superbiam, fastidium arrogantiamque magno opere fugiamus.

In prosperity let us most carefully avoid pride, disdain and arrogance.
m. CICERO.

Ut adversas res, secundas immoderate ferre, levitatis est.

It shows a weak mind not to bear prosperity as well as adversity with moderation.
n. CICERO.

Est quoddam prodire tenus si non datur ultrà.

It is something to proceed thus far, if it is not permitted to go farther.
o. HORACE.

Felix se nescit amari.

The prosperous man does not know whether he is loved.
p. LUCAN.

Donec eris felix multos numerabis amicos.

Whilst you are prosperous you will count many friends.
q. OVID.

Si numeres anno soles et nubila toto,
Invenies nitidum sæpius isse diem.

If you count the sunny and the cloudy days of the whole year, you will find that the sunshine predominates.
r. OVID.

Est felicibus difficilis miseriarum vera æstimatio.

The prosperous cannot easily form a right idea of misery.
s. QUINTILIAN.

Res secundæ valent commutare naturam, et raro quisquam erga bona sua satis cautus est.

Prosperity can change man's nature; and seldom is anyone cautious enough to resist the effects of good fortune.
t. QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS.

PROVERB.

Hac quoque de causâ, si te proverbia tangunt,
Mense malos Maio nubere vulgus ait.

For this reason, if you believe proverbs, let me tell you the common one: "It is unlucky to marry in May."
a. Ovid.

PROVIDENCE.

Deus haec fortasse benignâ Reducet in sedem vice.

Perhaps Providence by some happy change will restore these things to their proper places.
b. Horace.

Sæpius ventis agitatur ingens
Pinus, et celsae graviore casu Decidunt turres feriuntque summos Fulgura montes.

The lofty pine is oftenest shaken by the winds; high towers fall with a heavier crash; and the lightning strikes the highest mountains.
c. Horace.

Sperat quidem animus: quo eveniat, diis in manu est.

The mind is hopeful; success is in God's hand. (Man proposes, God disposes.)
d. Plautus.

Deus quædam munera universo humano generi dedit, a quibus excluditur nemo.

God has given some gifts to the whole human race, from which no one is excluded.
e. Seneca.

Et sceleratis sol oritur.

The sun shines even on the wicked.
f. Seneca.

PRUDENCE.

Multis terribilis, caveto multos.

If thou art terrible to many, then beware of many.
g. Ausonius.

Ita enim finitima sunt falsa veris ut in præcipitem locum non debeat se sapiens committere.

So near is falsehood to truth that a wise man would do well not to trust himself on the narrow edge.
h. Cicero.

Malo indisertam prudentiam, quam loquacem stultitiam.

I prefer silent prudence to loquacious folly.
i. Cicero.

Non est ab homine nunquam sobrio postulanda prudentia.

Prudence must not be expected from a man who is never sober.
j. Cicero.

Parvi enim sunt foris arma, nisi est consilium domi.

An army abroad is of little use unless there are prudent counsels at home.
k. Cicero.

Principum munus est resistere levitati multitudinis.

It is the duty of the nobles to oppose the fickleness of the multitude.
l. Cicero.

Prudentia est verum expectandarum fugiendarumque scientia.

Prudence is the knowledge of things to be sought, and those to be shunned.
m. Cicero.

Prudens in flammam ne manum injicio.

The prudent man does not put his hand into the fire.
n. Hieron, Junior.

Melius non tangere, clamo.

Better not touch me, I exclaim.

Nescit vox missa reverti.

A word once escaped can never be recalled.
q. Horace.

Arbore dejecto quivis ligna colligit.

When a tree is down everybody gathers wood.
r. Juvenal.

Nullum numen abest, si sit prudentia.

No protecting power is wanting, if prudence be used.
s. Juvenal.

Rarus venit in cœnacula miles.

The plundering soldier rarely visits the garret.
t. Juvenal.

Cede repugnanti, cedendo victor abibis.

Yield to the opposer; by yielding you will come off victor.
u. Ovid.

Crede mihi; miseros prudentia prima relinquit.

Believe me; it is prudence that first forsakes the wretched.
v. Ovid.

Intra fortunam quisque debet manere suam.

Every man should stay within his own fortune.
w. Ovid.

Modus omnibus in rebus, soror, optimum est habitu;
Nimia omnia nimium exhibent negotium hominibus ex se.

In everything the middle course is best: all things in excess bring trouble to men.
a. PLAUTUS.

Omnes bonos bonasque accurare addecet,
Suspicionem et culpam ut ab se segregent.

All good men and women should be on their guard to avoid guilt and even the suspicion of it.
b. PLAUTUS.

Viam qui nescit quâ deveniat ad mare
Eum oportet amnem quærere comitem sibi.

He who does not know his way to the sea should take a river for his guide.
c. PLAUTUS.

Alter remus aquas, alter mihi radat arenas.

Let one oar strike the water, the other scrape the sand.
d. PROPERTIUS.

Omnes homines, qui de rebus dubiis consultant, ab odio, amicitiâ, irâ atque misericordiâ vacuos esse decet.

All who deliberate on important matters, ought to be uninfluenced by hatred, friendship, anger or compassion.
e. SALLUST.

Extrema primo nemo tentavit loco.

No one tries extreme remedies at first.
f. SENECA.

Latere semper patere, quod latuit diu.

Leave in concealment what has long been concealed.
g. SENECA.

Post malam segetem serendum est.

After a bad crop, you should instantly begin to sow.
h. SENECA.

Caret periculo, qui etiam tutus cavet.

He is free from danger, who, even when safe, is on his guard.
i. SYRUS.

Consilio melius vinces quam iracundiâ.

You will conquer more surely by prudence than by passion.
j. SYRUS.

Deliberandum est diu, quod statuendum semel.

That should be considered long which can be decided but once.
k. SYRUS.

Difficilem oportet aurem habere crimina.

One should not lend a ready ear to criminal charges.
l. SYRUS.

Plura consilio quam vi perficimus.

We accomplish more by prudence than by force.
m. TACITUS.

Ratio et consilium, propriæ ducis artes.

Forethought and prudence are the proper qualities of a leader.
n. TACITUS.

Omnia prius verbis experiri quam armis sapientem decet.

It becomes a wise man to try negotiation before arms.
o. TERENCE.

Laudato ingentia rura,
Exiguum colito.

Praise a large demain, cultivate a small estate.
p. VIRGIL.

Litus ama: * * * altum alii teneant.

Keep close to the shore: let others venture on the deep.
q. VIRGIL.

PUNISHMENT.

Culpam pœna premit comes.

Punishment follows close on crime.
r. HORACE.

Estque pati pœnas quam meruisse minus.

It is less to suffer punishment than to deserve it.
s. OVID.

Nec ulla major pœna nequitiæ est, quam quod sibi et suis displicet.

There is no greater punishment of wickedness than that it is dissatisfied with itself and its deeds.
t. SENECA.

Quod antecedit tempus, maxima venturi supplicii pars est.

The time that precedes punishment is the severest part of it.
u. SENECA.

Habet aliquid ex iniquo omne magnum exemplum, quod contra singulos, utilitate publicâ rependitus.

Every great example of punishment has in it some injustice, but the suffering individual is compensated by the public good.
v. TACITUS.

Punitis ingeniis, gliscit auctoritas.

When men of talents are punished, authority is strengthened.
w. TACITUS.

Sera tamen tacitis pœna venit pedibus.

Punishment, though late, comes on with silent step.
x. TIBULLUS.

Q.

QUALITY.

Non numero hæc judicantur sed pondere.

These things are not judged of by their number, but by their weight.

a. CICERO.

R.

RASHNESS.

Audax omnia perpeti
Gens humana ruit per vetitum nefas.

The human race afraid of nothing, rushes on through every crime.

b. HORACE.

Non semper temeritas est felix.

Rashness is not always fortunate.

c. LIVY.

Paucis temeritas est bono, multis malo.

Rashness brings success to few, misfortune to many.

d. PHÆDRUS.

REASON.

Domina omnium et regina ratio.

Reason is the mistress and queen of all things.

e. CICERO.

Plus apud nos vera ratio valeat quam vulgi opinio.

Reason shall prevail with me more than popular opinion.

f. CICERO.

Plus ratio quam vis cæca valere solet.

Reason can generally do more than blind force.

g. GALLUS.

Quid nobis certius ipsis
Sensibus esse potest? quî vera ac falso notemus.

What can give us more sure knowledge than our senses? How else can we distinguish between the true and the false?

h. LUCRETIUS.

Nihil potest esse diuturnum cui non subest ratio.

Nothing can be lasting when reason does not rule.

i. QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS.

REBELLION.

Seditiosissimus quisque ignavus.

The most seditious is the most cowardly.

j. TACITUS.

Sævitque animis ignobile vulgus,
Jamque faces et saxa volant; furor omnia ministrat.

The rude rabble are enraged; now firebrands and stones fly; fury supplies them with arms.

k. VIRGIL.

REGRET.

Ploratur lacrymis amissa pecunia veris.

The loss of money is deplored with real tears.

l. JUVENAL.

RELIGION.

Deos placatos pietas efficiet et sanctitas.

Piety and holiness of life will propitiate the gods.

m. CICERO.

Res sacros non modo manibus attingi, se ne cogitatione quidem violari fas fuit.

Things sacred should not only not be touched with the hands, but not violated in thought.

n. CICERO.

Nihil enim in speciem fallacius est quam prava religio.

Nothing is more deceitful in appearance than false religion.

o. LIVY.

Quantum religio potuit suadere malorum!

How many evils has religion caused!

p. LUCRETIUS.

Scilicet adversis probitas exercita rebus
Tristi materiam tempore laudis habet.

Righteousness tried by adversity has good grounds for glorying in its sorrow.

q. OVID.

Animus hoc habet argumentum divinitatis suæ, quod illum divina delectant.

The soul has this proof of its divinity; that divine things delight it.

a. SENECA.

Nulla res carius constat quam quæ precibus empta est.

Nothing costs so much as what is bought by prayers.

b. SENECA.

REPENTANCE.

Quem pœnitet peccâsse, pœne est innocuus.

He who is sorry for having sinned is almost innocent.

c. SENECA.

Velox consilium sequitur pœnitentiâ.

Repentance follows hasty counsels.

d. SYRUS.

REPETITION.

Occidet miseros crambe repetitâ magistros.

Repetition, like re-hashed cabbage, kills the school-masters.

e. JUVENAL.

REPUTATION.

Damnum appellandum est cum malâ famâ lucrum.

Gain at the expense of reputation should be called loss.

f. SYRUS.

RESIGNATION.

Pereant amici, dum unà inimici intercidant.

Let our friends perish, provided that our enemies fall at the same time.

g. CICERO.

Omnem crede diem tibi diluxisse supremum.

Believe that each day which shines upon you is the last.

h. HORACE.

Summam nec metuas diem, nec optes.

You should neither fear nor wish for your last day.

i. MARTIAL.

Placato possum non miser esse deo.

If God be appeased, I cannot be wretched.

j. OVID.

Placeat homini quidquid deo placuit.

Let that please man which has pleased God.

k. SENECA.

Unum est levamentum malorum pati et necessitatibus suis obsequi.

One alleviation in misfortune is to endure and submit to necessity.

l. SENECA.

Vitæ est avidus quisquis non vult
Mundo secum pereunte mori.

He is greedy of life who is not willing to die when the world is perishing around him.

m. SENECA.

Quoniam id fieri quod vis non potest
Id velis quod possis.

As you cannot do what you wish, you should wish what you can do.

n. TERENCE.

Quem semper acerbum
Semper honoratum (sic dii voluistis) habeo.

That day I shall always recollect with grief; with reverence also, for the gods so willed it.

o. VIRGIL.

RESISTANCE.

Insitâ hominibus naturâ violentiæ resistere.

To resist violence is implanted in the nature of man.

p. TACITUS.

RESPONSIBILITY.

Culpam majorum posteri luunt.

Posterity pay for the sins of their fathers.

q. QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS.

REST.

Homines quamvis in turbidis rebus sint, tamen, si modo homines sunt, interdum animis relaxantur.

Men, in whatever anxiety they may be, if they are men, sometimes indulge in relaxation.

r. CICERO.

Da requiem; requietus ager bene credita reddit.

Take rest; a field that has rested gives a bountiful crop.

s. OVID.

Detur aliquando otium
Quiesque fessis.

Let the weary at length possess quiet rest.

t. SENECA.

Arcum intensio frangit, animum remissio.

Straining breaks the bow, and relaxation relieves the mind.

u. SYRUS.

Deus nobis hæc otia fecit.

God has given us this repose.

v. VIRGIL.

RETALIATION.

Ab alio expectes, alteri quod feceris.

You may expect from one person what you have done to another.

w. LABERIUS.

REVENGE.

Minuti
Semper et infirma est animi exiguique voluptas Ultio.

Revenge is always the weak pleasure of a little and narrow mind.
a. JUVENAL.

Sæpe intereunt aliis meditantes necem.

Those who plot the destruction of others often fall themselves.
b. PHÆDRUS.

Inhumanum verbum est ultio.

Revenge is an inhuman word.
c. SENECA.

Malevolus animus abditos dentes habet.

The malevolent have hidden teeth.
d. SYRUS.

Odia in longum jaciens, quæ reconderet, auctaque promeret.

Laying aside his resentment, he stores it up, to bring it forward with increased bitterness.
e. TACITUS.

REWARD.

Quis enim virtutem amplectitur ipsam,
Præmia si tollas?

For who will embrace even virtue itself, if you take away its rewards?
f. JUVENAL.

Acer et ad palmæ per se cursurus honores,
Si tamen horteris fortius ibit equus.

The spirited horse, which will of itself strive to beat in the race, will run still more swiftly if encouraged.
g. OVID.

Acta deos nunquam mortalia fallunt.

The deeds of men never escape the gods.
h. OVID.

RICHES.

Fortunam reverenter habe, quicumque
Dives ab exili progrediere loco.

Whoever thou art that hast suddenly become rich from great poverty, use thy good fortune with moderation.
i. AUSONIUS.

Crescentem sequitur cura pecuniam
Majorumque fames.

Increasing wealth is attended by care and by the desire of greater increase.
j. HORACE.

Et genus et virtus, nisi cum re, vilior algâ est.

Noble descent and worth, unless united with wealth, are esteemed no more than seaweed.
k. HORACE.

Imperat aut servit collecta pecunia cuique.

Riches either serve or govern the possessor.
l. HORACE.

Licet superbus ambules pecuniæ,
Fortuna non mutat genus.

Though you strut proud of your money, yet fortune has not changed your birth.
m. HORACE.

Nescio quid curtæ semper abest rei.

Something is always wanting to our imperfect fortune.
n. HORACE.

Omnis enim res,
Virtus, fama, decus, divina, humanaque pulchris
Divitiis parent.

For everthing divine and human, virtue, fame and honor, now obey the alluring influence of riches.
o. HORACE.

Dives fieri qui vult
Et cito vult fieri.

He who wishes to become rich wishes to become so immediately.
p. JUVENAL.

Misera est magni custodia censûs.

The care of a large estate is an unpleasant thing.
q. JUVENAL.

Non propter vitam faciunt patrimonia quidam,
Sed vitio cæci propter patrimonia vivunt.

Some men do not get estates for the purpose of enjoying life, but, blinded with error, they live only for their estates.
r. JUVENAL.

Rarus enim fermè sensus communis in illâ Fortunâ.

Common sense among men of fortune is rare.
s. JUVENAL.

Facile est momento quo quis velit, cedere possessione magnæ fortunæ; facere et parare eam, difficile atque arduum est.

It is easy at any moment to resign the possession of a great fortune; to acquire it is difficult and arduous.
t. LIVY.

Nihil est periculosius in hominibus mutatâ subito fortunâ.

Nothing is more dangerous to men than a sudden change of fortune.
u. QUINTILIAN.

Fabrum esse suæ quemque fortunæ.

Every one is the artificer of his own fortune.
v. SALLUST.

Aurea rumpunt tecta quietem.

Golden roofs break men's rest.
w. SENECA.

Is maxime divitiis utitur, qui minime divitiis indiget.

He makes the best use of riches, who needs them least.

a. SENECA.

Multis parâsse divitias non finis miseriarum fuit, sed mutatio. Non est in rebus vitium sed in animo.

The acquisition of wealth with many was not an end, but a change of their miseries. The fault, however, is not in the riches but in the mind.

b. SENECA.

Repente dives nemo factus est bonus.

No good man ever became suddenly rich.

c. SYRUS.

RIDICULE.

Ridiculum acri
Fortius et melius magnas plerumquesecat res.

Ridicule often cuts the (gordian) knot more effectively than the severity of satire.

d. HORACE.

RISK.

Nil enim prodest quod lædere non posset idem.

There is nothing profitable which cannot also injure.

e. OVID.

Necesse est facere sumptum, qui quærit lucrum.

He who seeks for gain, must be at some expense.

f. PLAUTUS.

Si quis mutuum quid dederit, sit pro proprio perditum;
Cum repetas, inimicum amicum beneficio invenis tuo.
Si mage exigere cupias, duarum rerum exoritur optio;
Vel illud, quod credideris perdas, vel illum amicum amiseris.

What you lend is lost; when you ask for it back, you may find a friend made an enemy by your kindness. If you begin to press him further, you have the choice of two things—either to lose your loan or lose your friend.

g. PLAUTUS.

ROYALTY.

An nescis longos regibus esse manus?

Knowest thou not that kings have long hands?

h. OVID.

Est aliquid validâ sceptra tenere manu.

It is something to hold the sceptre with a firm hand.

i. OVID.

Sit piger ad pœnas princeps, ad præmia velox.

A monarch should be slow to punish, swift to reward.

j. OVID.

Ars prima regni posse te invidiam pati.

The first art to be learned by a ruler is to endure envy.

k. SENECA.

Omne sub regno graviore regnum est.

Every monarch is subject to a mightier one.

l. SENECA.

RUMOR.

Vana quoque ad veros accessit fama timores.

Idle rumors were also added to well-founded apprehensions.

m. LUCAN.

Nam inimici famam non ita ut nata est ferunt.

Enemies carry a report in a form different from the original.

n. PLAUTUS.

Haud semper erret fama; aliquando et elegit.

Rumor does not always err; it sometimes even elects a man.

o. TACITUS.

Mobilitate viget, et vires acquirit eundo.

It flourishes by its very activity, and gains new strength by its movements.

p. VIRGIL.

S.

SATIETY.

Omnibus in rebus voluptatibus maximis fastidium finitimum est.

In everything satiety closely follows the greatest pleasures.

q. CICERO.

Omne supervacuum pleno de pectore manat.

Everything that is superfluous overflows from the full bosom.

r. HORACE.

Fecit statim, ut fit, fastidium copia.

Satiety, as is generally the case, immediately begot loathing.

s. LIVY.

Continuis voluptatibus vicina satietas.

Satiety is a neighbor to continued pleasures.

a. QUINTILIAN.

Nam id arbitror
Adprime in vitâ esse utile ut nequid nimis.

I hold this to be the rule of life, "Too much of anything is bad."

b. TERENCE.

SATIRE.

Difficile est satiram non scribere.

It is difficult not to write satire.

c. JUVENAL.

SATISFACTION.

Ohe!
Jam satis est.

Now, that's enough.

d. HORACE.

Populus me sibilat, at mihi plaudo
Ipse domi, simul ac nummos contemplor in arcâ.

The people hiss me, but I applaud myself at home, when I contemplate the money in my chest.

e. HORACE.

Qua positus fueris in statione, mane.

Stay in that station in which you have been placed.

f. OVID.

Si animus est æquus tibi satis habes, qui bene vitam colas.

If you are content, you have enough to live comfortably.

g. PLAUTUS.

Sufficit ad id, Natura quod poscit.

We have enough for what nature requires.

h. SENECA.

SEA, THE

Mare quidem commune cert 'est omnibus.

The sea is certainly common to all.

i. PLAUTUS.

Rari nantes in gurgite vasto.

A few swimming in the vast deep.

j. VIRGIL.

SECRECY.

Arcanum neque tu scrutaveris ullius unquam, commissumve teges et vino tortus et irâ.

Never inquire into another man's secret; but conceal that which is intrusted to you, though pressed both by wine and anger to reveal it.

k. HORACE.

Alium silere quod voles, primus sile.

If you wish another to keep your secret, first keep it yourself.

l. SENECA.

Eo magis præfulgebat quod non videbatur.

He shone with the greater splendor, because he was not seen.

m. TACITUS.

Tacitum vivit sub pectore vulnus.

The secret wound still lives within the breast.

n. VIRGIL.

SELF-ESTEEM.

Huic maxime putamus malo fuisse nimiam opinionem ingenii atque virtutis.

In our opinion, what chiefly led to his misfortunes was too high an opinion of his own talents and valor.

o. NEPOS.

Homine imperito nunquam quidquid injustius,
Qui nisi quod ipse facit nihil rectum putat.

Nothing can be more unjust than the ignorant man, who thinks that nothing is well done unless done by himself.

p. TERENCE.

SELFISHNESS.

Esto, ut nunc multi, dives tibi pauper amicis.

Be, as many now are, luxurious to yourself, parsimonious to your friends.

q. JUVENAL.

Nitimur in vetitum semper, cupimusque negata.

We are always striving for things forbidden, and coveting those denied us.

r. OVID.

Hac re videre nostra mala non possumus;
Alii simul delinquunt, censores sumus.

Hence we cannot see our own faults; when others transgress, we become censors.

s. PHÆDRUS.

Omnes sibi malle melius esse quam alteri.

Each one wishes for his own advantage, rather than that of others.

t. TERENCE.

SELF-LOVE.

Nemo in sese tentat descendere.

No man attempts to descend into his own bosom.

u. PERSIUS.

SERENITY.

In animi securitate vitam beatam ponimus.

We think a happy life consists in tranquility of mind.

v. CICERO.

Altissima quæque flumina minimo sono labuntur.

The deepest rivers flow with least sound.

w. QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS.

SHAME.

Male parta, male dilabuntur.

What is dishonorably got, is dishonorably squandered.

a. CICERO.

Negligere quid de se quisque sentiat, non solum arrogantis est, sed etiam omnino dissoluti.

To disregard what the world thinks of us is not only arrogant but utterly shameless.

b. CICERO.

Stultorum incurata pudor malus ulcera celat.

It is the false shame of fools that hides ulcered sores.

c. HORACE.

Omnia Græcè!
Cum sit turpe magis nostris nescire Latinè.

Everything is Greek, when it is more shameful to be ignorant of Latin.

d. JUVENAL.

Næ simul pudere quod non oportet cœperit; quod oportet non pudebit.

As soon as she (woman) begins to be ashamed of what she ought not, she will not be ashamed of what she ought.

LIVY.

Pessimus quidem pudor vel est parsimoniæ vel frugalitatis.

The worst kind of shame is being ashamed of frugality or poverty.

f. LIVY.

Turpe est in patriâ peregrinari, et in iis rebus quæ ad patriam pertinent hospitem esse.

It is shameful for a man to be a foreigner in his own country, and a stranger to her affairs and interests.

g. MINUTIUS.

Pudet hæc oppropria nobis et dici potuisse et non potuisse repelli.

I am not ashamed that these reproaches can be cast upon us, and that they cannot be repelled.

h. OVID.

Nam ego illum periisse duco, cui quidem periit pudor.

I count him lost, who is lost to shame

i. PLAUTUS.

Domini pudet non servitutis.

I am ashamed of my master and not of my servitude.

j. SENECA.

SICKNESS.

Pars sanitatis velle sanari fuit.

The wish to be cured is a part of the cure.

k. SENECA.

SILENCE.

Rarus sermo illis et magna libido tacendi.

Their conversation was brief, and their desire was to be silent.

l. JUVENAL.

Exigua est virtus, præstare silentia rebus;
At contra gravis est culpa, tacenda loqui.

To be silent is but a small virtue; but it is a serious fault to reveal secrets.

m. OVID.

Tacere multis discitur vitæ malis.

Silence is learned by the many misfortunes of life.

n. SENECA.

SIN.

Cui peccare licet peccat minus. Ipsa potestas
Semina nequitiæ languidiora facit.

He who has it in his power to commit sin, is less inclined to do so. The very idea of being able, weakens the desire.

o. OVID.

Omnes mali sumus. Quidquid itaque in alio reprehenditur, id unusquisque in suo sinu inveniet.

We are all sinful. Therefore whatever we blame in another we shall find in our own bosoms.

p. SENECA.

SKILL.

Materiam superabat opus.

The workmanship surpassed the materials.

q. OVID.

SLANDER.

Homines qui gestant, quique auscultant crimina,
Si meo arbitratu liceat, omnes pendeant,
Gestores linguis, auditores auribus.

Your tittle-tattlers, and those who listen to slander, by my good will should all be hanged—the former by their tongues, the latter by the ears.

r. PLAUTUS.

SLAVERY.

Nimia libertas et populis et privatis in nimiam servitutem cadit.

Excessive liberty leads both nations and individuals into excessive slavery.

s. CICERO.

Beneficium accipere libertatem vendere est.

To receive a benefit is to sell your liberty.

t. LABERIUS.

Nemo liber est, qui corpori servit.

No man is free who is a slave to the flesh.

u. SENECA.

SLEEP.

Et idem
Indignor quandoque bonus dormitat Homerus;
Verum opere longo fas est obrepere somnum.

I, too, am indignant when the worthy Homer nods; yet in a long work it is allowable for sleep to creep over the writer.
a. HORACE.

Alliciant somnos tempus motusque merumque.

Time, motion and wine cause sleep.
b. OVID.

SORROW.

Stultum est in luctu capillum sibi evellere, quasi calvitio mæror levaretur.

It is foolish to pluck out one's hair for sorrow, as if grief could be assuaged by baldness.
c. CICERO.

Oderunt hilarem tristes tristemque jocosi.

The sorrowful dislike the gay, and the gay the sorrowful.
d. HORACE.

Nulla dies mærore caret.

There is no day without sorrow.
e. SENECA.

SPEECH.

Lingua mali pars pessima servi.

The tongue is the vile slave's vilest part.
f. JUVENAL.

Sæpe tacens vocem verbaque vultus habet.

The silent countenance often speaks.
g. OVID.

Negatas artifex sequi voces.

He attempts to use language which he does not know.
h. PERSIUS.

Sermoni huic obsonas.

You drown him by your talk.
i. PLAUTUS.

Talis hominibus est oratio qualis vita.

Men's conversation is like their life.
j. SENECA.

Sæpius locutum, nunquam me tacuisse pœnitet.

I have often regretted having spoken, never having kept silent.
k. SYRUS.

Sermo animi est imago; qualis vir, talis et oratio est.

Conversation is the image of the mind; as the man, so is his language.
l. SYRUS.

Vox faucibus hæsit.

My voice stuck in my throat.
m. VIRGIL.

SPENDING.

Non tibi illud apparere si sumas potest.

If you spend a thing you cannot have it.
n. PLAUTUS.

SPIRITUALITY.

Deus est in pectore nostro.

There is a divinity within our breast.
o. OVID.

Est deus in nobis, et sunt commercia cœli. Sedibus ætheriis spiritus ille venit.

There is a god within us, and we have intercourse with heaven. That spirit comes from abodes on high.
p. OVID.

STRENGTH.

Nihil tam firmum est cui periculum non sit etiam ab invalido.

Nothing is strong that may not be endangered even by the weak.
q. QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS.

Plus potest qui plus valet.

The stronger always succeeds.
r. PLAUTUS.

STUDY.

Hæc studia adolescentiam alunt, senectutem oblectant, secundas res ornant, adversis solatium et perfugium præbent, delectant domi, non impediunt foris, pernoctant nobiscum, peregrinantur, rusticantur.

These (literary) studies are the food of youth, and consolation of age; they adorn prosperity, and are the comfort and refuge of adversity; they are pleasant at home, and are no incumbrance abroad; they accompany us at night, in our travels, and in our rural retreats.
s. CICERO.

STYLE.

Aliter scribimus quod eos solos quibus mittimus, aliter quod multos lecturos putamus.

We use one style, when we think that only those to whom we write will read our letters; and another, when many will read them.
t. CICERO.

SUCCESS.

Omne tulit punctum qui miscuit utile dulci.

He has carried every point, who has mingled the useful with the agreeable.
u. HORACE.

Successus improborum plures allicit.

The success of the wicked entices many more.
v. PHÆDRUS.

Honesta quædam scelera successus facit.

Success makes some crimes honorable.
w. SENECA.

Nullus cunctationi locus est in eo consilio quod non potest laudari nisi peractum.

There is no room for hesitation in any enterprise which can be justified only by success.

a. TACITUS.

Non equidem invideo; miror magis.

Indeed, I do not envy your fortune; I rather am surprised at it.

b. VIRGIL.

SUFFERING.

Ratio in angustis facile est contemnere vitam;
Fortiter ille facit qui miser esse potest.

It is easy in adversity to despise death; he has real fortitude who bears his sufferings.

c. MARTIAL.

Leniter ex merito quidquid patiare ferendum est,
Quæ venit indigne pœna dolenda venit.

What is deservedly suffered must be borne with calmness, but when the pain is unmerited, the grief is resistless.

d. OVID.

Levia perpessi sumus
Si flenda patimur.

We have suffered lightly, if we have suffered what we should weep for.

e. SENECA.

Magis exurunt
Quos secretæ lacerant curæ.

They suffer not whom secret cares torment.

f. SENECA.

SUFFRAGE.

Nam ego in istâ sum sententiâ, quâ te fuisse semper scio, nihil ut fuerit in suffragiis voce melius.

I am of the opinion which you have always held, that "viva voce" voting at elections is the best method.

g. CICERO.

Non ego ventosæ plebis suffragia venor.

I court not the votes of the fickle mob.

h. HORACE.

SUPERSTITION.

Accedit etiam mors, quæ quasi saxum Tantalo semper impendit: tum superstitio, quâ qui est imbutus quietus esse numquam potest.

Death approaches, which is always impending like the stone over Tantalus: then comes superstition with which he who is imbued can never have peace of mind.

i. CICERO.

Superstitio, in quâ inest inanis timor Dei; religio, quæ Dei pio cultu continetur.

There is in superstition a senseless fear of God; religion consists in the pious worship of God.

j. CICERO.

Superstitione tollendâ religio non tollitur.

Religion is not removed by removing superstition.

k. CICERO.

Minimis etiam rebus prava religio inserit deos.

A foolish superstition introduces the influences of the gods even in the smallest matters.

SUSCEPTIBILITY.

Quem res plus nimis delectavere secundæ
Mutatæ quatient.

The man who most enjoys prosperity, will most acutely feel adversity.

m. HORACE.

SUSPICION.

Paullum distare videtur
Suspectus vereque reus.

The suspected and the really guilty seem to differ but slightly.

n. AUSONIUS.

Cautus enim metuit foveam lupus, accipiterque
Suspectos laqueos, et opertum milvius hamum.

The wolf dreads the pitfall, the hawk suspects the snare, and the kite the covered hook.

o. HORACE.

Ad tristem partem strenua est suspicio.

The losing side is full of suspicion.

p. SYRUS.

Omnes, quibus res sunt minus
Secundæ, magis sunt, nescio quomodo,
Suspiciosi; ad contumeliam omnia accipiunt magis;
Propter suam impotentiam se credunt negligi.

All persons as they become less prosperous, are the more suspicious. They take everything as an affront; and from their conscious weakness, presume that they are neglected.

q. TERENCE.

SWEARING.

Juvavi linguâ, mentem injuratam gero.

I have sworn with my tongue, but my mind is unsworn.

r. CICERO.

In totum jurare, nisi ubi necesse est, gravi viro parum convenit.

To swear, except when necessary, is unbecoming to an honorable man.

s. QUINTILIAN.

T.

TALENTS.

Magni est ingenii revocare mentem a sensibus, et cogitationem a consuetudine abducere.

It is a proof of great talents to recall the mind from the senses, and to separate thought from habit.

a. CICERO.

TASTE.

Poscentes vario multum diversa palato.

Requiring, with various tastes, things very unlike.

b. HORACE.

Fastidientis est stomachi multa degustare.

It proves a squeamish stomach to taste of many things.

c. SENECA.

TEACHING.

Quod enim munus reipublicæ afferre majus, meliusve possumus, quam si docemus atque erudimus juventutem?

What greater or better gift can we offer the republic, than to teach and instruct our youth?

d. CICERO.

TEARS.

Hinc illæ lacrymæ.

Hence these tears.

e. HORACE.

Est quædam flere voluptas;
Expletur lacrymis egeriturque dolor.

It is some relief to weep; grief is satisfied and carried off by tears.

f. OVID.

Interdum lacrymæ pondera vocis habent.

Tears are sometimes as weighty as words.

g. OVID.

Sunt lacrymæ rerum et mentem mortalia tangunt.

Tears are due to human misery, and human sufferings touch the mind.

h. VIRGIL.

TEMPERANCE.

Est in aquâ dulci non invidiosa voluptas.

There is no small pleasure in pure water.

i. OVID.

Bonarum rerum consuetudo pessima est.

The too constant use even of good things is hurtful.

j. SYRUS.

THOUGHT.

Vivere est cogitare.

To think is to live.

k. CICERO.

TIME.

Opinionum enim commenta delet dies; naturæ judicia confirmat.

Time destroys the groundless conceits of men; it confirms decisions founded on reality.

l. CICERO.

Quid non longa valebit permutare dies?

What will not length of time be able to change?

m. CLAUDIANUS.

Damnosa quid non imminuit dies?

What does not destructive time destroy?

n. HORACE.

Quidquid sub terrâ est, in apricum proferet ætas;
Defodiet condetque nitentia.

Time will bring to light whatever is hidden; it will cover up and conceal what is now shining in splendor.

o. HORACE.

Singula de nobis anni prædantur euntes.

Each passing year robs us of some possession.

p. HORACE.

Tempus edax rerum.

Time that devours all things.

q. HORACE.

Truditur dies die.

One day is pressed on by another.

r. HORACE.

Nondum omnium dierum sol occidit.

The sun of all my days has not yet set.

s. LIVY.

Volat hora per orbem.

The hours fly along in a circle.

t. LUCRETIUS.

Caducis
Percussu crebo saxa cavantur aquis.

Stones are hollowed out by the constant dropping of water.

u. OVID.

Labitur occulte, fallitque volubilis ætas,
Ut celer admissis labitur amnis aquis.

Time steals on and escapes us, like the swift river that glides on with rapid stream.

v. OVID.

Temporis ars medicina fere est.

Time is generally the best medicine.
a. Ovid.

Utendum est ætate; cito pede labitur ætas.

We must improve our time; time goes with rapid foot.
b. Ovid.

Longissimus dies cito conditur.

The longest day soon comes to an end.
c. Pliny the Younger.

Infinita est velocitas temporis quæ magis apparet respicientibus.

The swiftness of time is infinite, which is still more evident to those who look back upon the past.
d. Seneca.

Nullum ad nocendum tempus angustum est malis.

No time is too short for the wicked to injure their neighbors.
e. Seneca.

Omnis nimium longa properanti mora est.

Every delay is too long to one who is in a hurry.
f. Seneca.

Quidquid cœpit, et desinit.

Whatever begins, also ends.
g. Seneca.

Quod ratio non quit sæpe sanavit mora.

Time often heals what reason cannot.
h. Seneca.

Volat ambiguis
Mobilis alis hora.

The swift hour flies on double wings.
i. Seneca.

Scelera impetu, bona consilia morâ valescunt.

Crimes succeed by sudden despatch; honest counsels gain vigor by delay.
j. Tacitus.

TRAINING.

Viamque insiste domandi
Dum faciles animi juvenum, dum mobilis ætas.

Take the course of a strong rule, while the mind of youth is flexible and impressible.
k. Virgil.

TREACHERY.

Nemo unquam sapiens proditori credendum putavit.

No wise man ever thought that a traitor should be trusted.
l. Cicero.

Ipsa se fraus, etiamsi initio cautior fuerit, detegit.

Treachery, though at first very cautious, in the end betrays itself.
m. Livy.

TRIFLES.

Levitatis est inanem aucupari rumorem.

His is a trifling character who seeks for fame through silly reports.
n. Cicero.

Hæc nugæ seria ducent
In mala.

These trifles will lead to serious mischief.
o. Horace.

Ut vellem his potius nugis tota illa dedisset
Tempora sævitiæ.

Would to heaven he had given up to trifles like these all the time which he devoted to cruelty.
p. Juvenal.

Dare pondus idonea fumo.

Fit to give weight to smoke.
q. Persius.

Magno conatu magnas nugas.

By great efforts obtain great trifles.
r. Terence.

TROUBLE.

Hoc scito nimio celerius
Venire quod molestum est, quam id quod cupide petas.

Know this, that troubles come swifter than the things we desire.
s. Plautus.

TRUTH.

Judicis est semper in causis verum sequi.

It is a judge's duty in all trials to follow truth.
t. Cicero.

Naturâ inest mentibus nostris insatiabilis quædam cupiditas veri videndi.

Our minds possess by nature an insatiable desire to know the truth.
u. Cicero.

Nihil est veritatis luce dulcius.

Nothing is more delightful than the light of truth.
v. Cicero.

Qui semel a veritate deflexit, hic non majore religione ad perjurium quam ad mendacium perduci consuevit.

He who has once deviated from the truth, usually commits perjury with as little scruple as he would tell a lie.
w. Cicero.

Quid verum atque decens curo et rogo, et omnis in hoc sum.

My cares and my inquiries are for decency and truth, and in this I am wholly occupied.
x. Horace.

Ridentem dicere verum,
Quid vetat.

What forbids a man to speak the truth in a laughing way?
a. HORACE.

Qui non liberè veritatem pronunciat, proditor est veritatis.

He who does not speak the truth freely, is a betrayer of the truth.
b. INST. EPIL.

Veritatem laborare nimis sæpe, aiunt, extingui nunquam.

It is said that truth is often eclipsed but never extinguished.
c. LIVY.

Pericula veritati sæpe contigua.

Truth is often attended with danger.
d. AMMIANUS MARCELLINUS.

Veritatis absolutus sermo ac semper est simplex.

The language of truth is unadorned and always simple.
e. AMMIANUS MARCELLINUS.

Non opus est verbis, credite rebus ait.

There is no need of words; believe facts.
f. OVID.

Ego verum amo, verum volo mihi dici; mendacem odi.

I love truth and wish to have it always spoken to me: I hate a liar.
g. PLAUTUS.

Dum omnia quærimus, aliquando ad verum, ubi minime expectavimus, perveminus.

While we are examining into everything we sometimes find truth where we least expected it.
h. QUINTILIAN.

Veritas nunquam perit.

Truth never perishes.
i. SENECA.

Veritas odit moras.

Truth hates delays.
j. SENECA.

Veritatem dies aperit.

Time discovers truth.
k. SENECA.

Veritatis simplex oratio est.

The language of truth is simple.
l. SENECA.

Veritas visû et morâ, falsa festinatione et incertis valescunt.

Truth is confirmed by inspection and delay: falsehood by haste and uncertainty.
m. TACITUS.

TYRANNY.

Quid violentius aure tyranni?

What is more cruel than a tyrant's ear?
n. JUVENAL.

Gaudetque viam fecisse ruinâ.

He rejoices to have made his way by ruin.
o. LUCAN.

Omnes habentur et dicuntur tyranni, qui potestate sunt perpetuâ, in eâ civitate quae libertate usa est.

All men are held and called tyrants, who possess perpetual power, in a state which once enjoyed freedom.
p. NEPOS.

U.

UBIQUITY.

Nusquam est, qui ubique est.

He who is everywhere is nowhere.
q. SENECA.

UNCERTAINTY.

Quis scit, an adjiciant hodiernæ crastina summæ
Tempora Di superi?

Who knows whether the gods will add tomorrow to the present hour?
r. HORACE.

Ludit in humanis divina potentia rebus,
Et certam præsens vix habet hora fidem.

Heaven makes sport of human affairs, and the present hour gives no sure promise of the next.
s. OVID.

Omnia sunt hominum tenui pendentia filo:
Et subito casu, quæ valuere, ruunt.

All human things hang on a slender thread: the strongest fall with a sudden crash.
t. OVID.

UNHAPPINESS.

Graviora quæ patiantur videntur jam hominibus quam quæ metuant.

Present sufferings seem far greater to men than those they merely dread.

a. LIVY.

Ego esse miserun credo, cui placet nemo.

I believe that man to be wretched whom none can please.

b. MARTIAL.

Miserias properant suas
Audire miseri.

The wretched hasten to hear of their own miseries.

c. SENECA.

Plus impetus majorem constantiam penes miseros.

There is more violence as well as perseverance among the wretched.

d. TACITUS.

UNIFORMITY.

Servetur ad imum,
Qualis ab incepto processerit, et sibi constet.

From first to last a man should maintain his character and in all things be consistent.

e. HORACE.

Cantilenam eandem canis.

You are harping on the same string.

f. TERENCE.

UNION.

Etenim omnes artes, quæ ad humanitatem pertinent, habent quoddam commune vinculum, et quasi cognatione quâdam inter se continentur.

All the arts which belong to polished life have some common tie, and are connected as it were by some relationship.

g. CICERO.

Concordiâ res parvæ cresunt, discordiâ maximæ dilabantur.

By union the smallest states thrive, by discord the greatest are destroyed.

h. SALLUST.

Auxilia humilia firma consensus facit.

Union gives strength to the humble.

i. SYRUS.

Quo res cunque cadant, unum et commune periculum,
Una salus ambobus erit.

Whatever may be the issue we shall share one common danger, one safety.

j. VIRGIL.

VANITY.

Quid dignum tanto feret hic promissor hiatu?
Parturiunt montes; nascetur ridiculus mus.

What will this boaster produce worthy of this mouthing? The mountains are in labor; a ridiculous mouse will be born.

k. HORACE.

Qui genus suum
Aliena laudat.

He who boasts of his descent, praises the deeds of another.

l. SENECA.

VENERATION.

Præceptores suos adolescens veneratur ac suspicit.

The young venerate and look up to their teachers.

m. SENECA.

VICE.

Velocius ac citius nos
Corrumpunt vitiorum exempla domestica magnis
Cum subeant animos auctoribus.

We are more speedily and fatally corrupted by domestic examples of vice, when they impress our minds by high authority.

n. HORACE.

Nemo repente fuit turpissimus.

No man ever became utterly depraved in an instant.

o. JUVENAL.

Parcere personis, dicere de vitiis.

To spare persons, to lash vices.

p. MARTIAL.

Amici vitium si feras, facis tuum.

If you share the crime of your friend, you make it your own.

q. SYRUS.

Neque femina amissâ pudicitiâ alia abnuerit.

When a woman has lost her chastity, she will shrink from no crime.

a. TACITUS.

Alitur vitium vivitque tegendo.

Vice thrives and lives by concealment.

b. VIRGIL.

VIRTUE.

Accipere quam facere injuriam præstat.

It is better to receive than to do a wrong.

c. CICERO.

Est haec sæculi labes quædam et macula virtuti invidere, velle ipsum florem dignitatis infringere.

It is the stain and disgrace of the age to envy virtue, and to be anxious to crush the very flower of dignity.

d. CICERO.

Honor est præmium virtutis.

Honor is the reward of virtue.

e. CICERO.

In virtute sunt multi adscensus.

In the approach to virtue there are many steps.

f. CICERO.

Nam ut quisque est vir optimus, ita difficillime esse alios improbos suspicatur.

The more virtuous any man is, the less easily does he suspect others to be vicious.

g. CICERO.

Nec vero habere virtutem satis est, quasi artem aliquam, nisi utare.

It is not enough merely to possess virtue, as if it were an art; it should be practised.

h. CICERO.

Nihil est, mihi crede, virtute formosius, nihil pulchrius, nihil amabilius.

Nothing, believe me, is more beautiful than virtue; nothing fairer; nothing more lovely.

i. CICERO.

Vacare culpâ magnum est solatium.

To be free from fault is a great comfort.

j. CICERO.

Vera laus uni virtuti debetur.

True praise is due to virtue alone.

k. CICERO.

Virtus in usu sui tota posita est.

The whole of its virtue consists in its practice.

l. CICERO.

Virtute enim ipsâ non tam multi prætidi esse, quam videri volunt.

Fewer possess virtue, than those who wish us to believe that they possess it.

m. CICERO.

Virtutem nemo unquam acceptam deo retulit.

No one ever acknowledged having received virtue from a god.

n. CICERO.

Ipsa quidem virtus præmium sibi.

Virtue is indeed its own reward.

o. CLAUDIANUS.

Vile latens virtus.

Virtue when concealed is a worthless thing.

p. CLAUDIANUS.

Oderunt peccare boni virtutis amore.

The good hate sin because they love virtue.

q. HORACE.

Sincerum est nisi vas, quodcunque infundis acescit.

Unless the vessel be pure, whatever you put in will turn sour.

r. HORACE.

Uni æquus virtuti atque ejus amicis.

Tolerant only to virtue and her friends.

s. HORACE.

Virtus est medium vitiorum et utriusque reductum.

Virtue is a medium between two vices, and is at a distance from both.

t. HORACE.

Virtus est vitium fugere, et sapientiâ prima.

Virtue consists in avoiding vice, and is the highest wisdom.

u. HORACE.

Virtutem incolumem adimus,
Sublatam ex oculis quærimus.

We hate virtue when it is safe, when removed from our sight we diligently seek it.

v. HORACE.

Major famæ sitis est quam
Virtutis: quis enim virtutem amplectitur ipsam
Præmia si tollas.

The thirst for fame is greater than that for virtue; for who would embrace virtue itself if you take away its rewards?

w. JUVENAL.

Nobilitas sola est atque unica virtus.

Virtue is the only and true nobility.

x. JUVENAL.

Semita certè
Tranquillæ per virtutem patet unica vitæ.

The only path to a tranquil life is through virtue.

y. JUVENAL.

Virtus laudatur et alget.

Virtue is praised and freezes.

z. JUVENAL.

Virtutem videant, intabescantque relictâ.

Let them (the wicked) see the beauty of virtue, and pine at having forsaken her.

a. JUVENAL.

Vivendum est recte; cum propter plurima tum his Præcipue causis, ut linguas mancipiorum
Contemnas; nam lingua mali pars pessima servi.

You should live virtuously for many reasons, but particularly that you may despise the tongues of your slaves. The tongue is the worst part of a bad servant.

b. JUVENAL.

Magnos homines virtute metimur non fortunâ.

We estimate great men by their virtue not by their success.

c. NEPOS.

Dummodo morata recte veniat, dotata est satis.

Provided a woman be well principled, she has dowry enough.

d. PLAUTUS.

Quam ad probos propinquitate proxime te adjunxeris,
Tam optimum est.

The more closely you can unite yourself with the virtuous, so much the better.

e. PLAUTUS.

Qui per virtutem peritat, non interit.

He who dies for virtue, does not perish.

f. PLAUTUS.

Virtus, etiamsi quosdam impetus a naturâ sumit, tamen perficienda doctrinâ est.

Although virtue receives some of its excellencies from nature, yet it is perfected by education.

g. QUINTILIAN.

Nihil tam alte natura constituit quo virtus non possit eniti.

Nature has placed nothing so high that virtue cannot reach it.

h. QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS.

Divitiarum et formæ gloria fluxa atque fragilis; virtus clara æternaque habetur.

The glory of riches and of beauty is frail and transitory; virtue remains bright and eternal.

i. SALLUST.

Sine virtute esse amicitia nullo pacto potest; quæ autem inter bonos amicitia dicitur hæc inter malos factio est.

There can be no friendship without virtue; for that intimacy, which among good men is called friendship, becomes faction among the bad.

j. SALLUST.

Facilis est ad beatam vitam via; inite modo, ipsis dis bene juvantibus.

The path to a happy life is easy: only enter it boldly with the favor of the gods.

k. SENECA.

Nunquam potest non esse virtuti locus.

There must ever be a place for virtue.

l. SENECA.

Virtute retro ire non licet.

Virtue is not allowed to go backward.

m. SENECA.

Explorant adversa viros. Perque aspera dura
Nititur ad laudem virtus interrita clivo.

Adversity tries men; but virtue struggles after fame regardless of the adverse heights.

n. SILIUS ITALICUS.

Puras Deus non plenas adspicit manus.

God looks at pure, not full, hands.

o. SYRUS.

Stat sua cuique dies; breve et irreparabile tempus
Omnibus est vitæ; sed famam extendere factis
Hoc virtutis opus.

Every man has his appointed day; life is brief and irrevocable; but it is the work of virtue to extend our fame by our deeds.

p. VIRGIL.

W.

WANT.

Semper avarus eget.

The miser is ever in want.

q. HORACE.

Tam deest avaro quod habet, quam quod non habet.

The miser is as much in want of what he has, as of what he has not.

r. SYRUS.

WAR.

Veni, vidi, vici.

I came, I saw, I conquered.

s. JULIUS CÆSAR.

Delenda est Carthago.

Carthage must be destroyed.

t. CATO.

Bellum autem ita suscipiatur, ut nihil aliud, nisi pax, quæsita videatur.

Let war be so carried on that no other object may seem to be sought but the acquisition of peace.

a. CICERO.

Silent leges inter arma.

The law is silent during war.

b. CICERO.

Ducis ingenium res
Adversae nudare solent, celare secundae.

Adversity reveals the skill of a general, prosperity conceals it.

c. HORACE.

Alta sedent civilis vulnera dextræ.

The wounds of civil war are deeply felt.

d. LUCAN.

Non tam portas intrare patentes
Quam fregisse juvat; nec tam patiente colono
Arva premi, quam si ferro populetur et igni;
Concessâ pudet ire viâ.

The conqueror is not so much pleased by entering into open gates, as by forcing his way. He desires not the fields to be cultivated by the patient husbandman; he would have them laid waste by fire and sword. It would be his shame to go by a way already opened.

e. LUCAN.

Omnibus hostes
Reddite nos populis—civile avertite vellum.

Make us enemies of every people on earth, but prevent a civil war.

f. LUCAN.

Rara fides probitasque viris qui castra sequuntur.

Good faith and probity are rarely found among the followers of the camp.

g. LUCAN.

Nihil in bello oportet contemni.

Nothing should be despised in war.

h. NEPOS.

Adjuvat in bello pacatæ ramus olivæ.

In war the olive branch of peace is of use.

i. OVID.

Fortuna belli semper ancipiti in loco est.

The fortune of war is always doubtful.

j. SENECA.

Facilior inter malos consensus ad bellum quam in pace ad concordiam.

The wicked find it easier to unite for war, than for concord in peace.

k. TACITUS.

Miseram pacem vel bello bene mutari.

Even war is better than a wretched peace.

l. TACITUS.

Nec quies gentium sine armis, nec arma sine stipendiis, nec stipendia sine tributis.

There can be no tranquillity of nations without troops, no troops without pay, no pay without taxes.

m. TACITUS.

Ratio et consilium propriæ ducis artes.

The proper qualities of a general are judgment and deliberation.

n. TACITUS.

Dolus an virtus quis in hoste requirat?

Who asks whether the enemy were defeated by strategy or valor?

o. VIRGIL.

Sævit amor ferri et scelerata insania belli.

The love of arms and the mad wickedness of war are raging.

p. VIRGIL.

Una salus victis nullam sperare salutem.

The only safety for the conquered is to expect no safety.

q. VIRGIL.

WEAKNESS.

Nequeo monstrare et sentio tantum.

I only feel, but want the power to paint.

r. JUVENAL.

Alieno in loco
Haud stabile regnum est.

The throne of another is not stable for thee.

s. SENECA.

WEALTH.

Et genus et formam regina pecunia donat.

All powerful money gives birth and beauty.

t. HORACE.

In pretio pretium nunc est: dat census honores,
Census amicitias; pauper ubique jacit.

Money now-a-days is money; money brings office; money gains friends: everywhere the poor man is down.

u. OVID.

Opum furiata cupido.

The ungovernable passion for wealth.

v. OVID.

Paucis carior est fides quam pecunia.

Few set a higher value on good faith, than on money.

w. SALLUST.

WINE.

Fœcundi calices quem non fecere disertum.

Whom has not the inspiring bowl made eloquent.

x. HORACE.

Quis post vina gravem militiam aut pauperiem crepat?

Who prates of war or want after his wine?

a. HORACE.

Spes donare novas largus, amaraque
Curarum eluere efficax.

Mighty to inspire new hopes, and able to drown the bitterness of cares.

b. HORACE.

WISDOM.

Malo indisertam prudentiam quam stultitiam loquacem.

I prefer the wisdom of the uneducated to the folly of the loquacious.

c. CICERO.

Quis nam igitur liber? Sapiens qui sibi imperiosus.

Who then is free? The wise man who can govern himself.

d. HORACE.

Sapere aude.

Dare to be wise.

e. HORACE.

Victrix fortunæ sapientia.

Wisdom is the conqueror of fortune.

f. JUVENAL.

Non est, crede mihi, sapientis dicere "vivam."
Sera nimis vita est crastina, vive hodie.

It is not, believe me, the act of a wise man to say, "I will live." To-morrow's life is too late; live to-day.

g. MARTIAL.

Quisquis plus justo non sapit, ille sapit.

Whoever is not too wise, is wise.

h. MARTIAL.

Festinare nocet, nocet et cunctatio sæpe;
Tempore quæque suo qui facit, ille sapit.

It is injurious to hasten, and delay is often injurious. That man is wise who does everything in its proper time.

i. OVID.

Feliciter sapit qui alieno periculo sapit.

He gains wisdom in a happy way, who gains it by another's experience.

j. PLAUTUS.

Nemo solus sapit.

No man is the only wise man.

k. PLAUTUS.

Nemo mortalium omnibus horis sapit.

No one is wise at all times.

l. PLINY THE ELDER.

Satis eloquentiæ, sapientiæ parum.

Enough eloquence, little wisdom.

m. SALLUST.

Melius in malis sapimus, secunda rectum auferunt.

We become wiser by adversity; prosperity destroys our appreciation of the right.

n. SENECA.

Nulli sapere casu obtigit.

No man was ever wise by chance.

o. SENECA.

Dictum sapienti sat est.

A word to the wise is enough.

p. TERENCE.

Isthuc est sapere non quod ante pedes modo est
Videre sed etiam illa, quæ futura sunt Prospicere.

True wisdom consists not in seeing what is immediately before our eyes, but in foreseeing what is to come.

q. TERENCE.

WIT.

O quantum est subitis casibus ingenium.

What quick wit is found in sudden straits.

r. MARTIAL.

WOMAN.

Nulla fere causa est, in quâ non fœmina litem.

There are few disputes in life, which do not originate with a woman.

s. JUVENAL.

Parvis mobilis rebus animus muliebris.

A woman's mind is affected by the meanest gifts.

t. LIVY.

Mulieri nimio male facere melius est onus, quam bene.

A woman finds it much easier to do ill than well.

u. PLAUTUS.

Multa sunt mulierum vitia, sed hoc e multis maximum,
Cum sibi nimis placent, nimisque operam dant ut placeant viris.

Women have many faults, but of the many this is the greatest, that they please themselves too much, and give too little attention to pleasing the men.

v. PLAUTUS.

Aut amat aut odit mulier, nihil est tertium.

A woman either loves or hates, she knows no medium.

w. SYRUS.

Novi ingenium mulierum;
Nolunt ubi velis, ubi nolis cupiunt ultro.

I know the nature of women. When you will, they will not; when you will not, they come of their own accord.

x. TERENCE.

Varium et mutabile semper, Fœmina.

A woman is always changeable and capricious.
a. VIRGIL.

WORDS.

Verbaque dicuntur dictis contraria verbis.

The same words imply a different meaning.
b. OVID.

WORK.

Ardua molimur; sed nulla nisi ardua virtus.

I attempt a different work; but there is no excellence without difficulty.
c. OVID.

WRITING.

Sæpe stilum vertas, iterum quæ digna legi sint Scripturus.

Often turn the stile [correct with care], if you expect to write anything worthy of being read twice.
d. HORACE.

Scribendi recte sapere et principium et fons.

Good sense is the foundation and source of good writing.
e. HORACE.

Sumite materiam vestris qui scribitis æquam Viribus.

Ye who write, choose a subject suited to your abilities.
f. HORACE.

Tantum series junctura pollet.

Of so much force are system and connection.
g. HORACE.

Ubi plura nitent in carmine, non ego paucis
Offendar maculis, quas aut incuria fudit,
Aut humana parum cavit natura.

Where there are many beauties in a work, I shall not cavil at a few faults proceeding either from negligence or from the imperfection of our nature.
h. HORACE.

Tenet insanabile multo
Scribendi cocoëthes, et ægro in corde senescit.

An incurable itch for scribbling takes possession of many, and grows inveterate in their insane breasts.
i. JUVENAL.

Scripta ferunt annos; scriptis Agamemnone nosti,
Et quisquis contra vel simul arma tulit.

Writings survive the years; it is by writings that you know Agamemnon, and those who fought for or against him.
j. OVID.

Y.

YIELDING.

Cogi qui potest nescit mori.

The man who can be compelled knows not how to die.
k. SENECA.

YOUTH.

Prima commendatio proficiscitur a modestiâ, tum pietate in parentes, tum in suos benevolentiâ.

The chief recommendation (in a young man) is modesty, then dutiful conduct towards parents, then affection for kindred.
l. CICERO.

Teneris, heu, lubrica moribus ætas!

Alas! the slippery nature of tender youth.
m. CLAUDIANUS.

Nil dictu fœdum visuque hæc limina tangat
Intra quæ puer est.

Let nothing foul to either eye or ear reach those doors within which dwells a boy.
n. JUVENAL.

Parentes objurgatione digni sunt, qui nolunt liberos suos severâ lege proficere.

Parents deserve reproof when they refuse to benefit their children by severe discipline.
o. PETRONIUS ARBITER.

Juvenile vitium regere non posse impetum.

It is the fault of youth that it cannot govern its own violence.
p. SENECA.

Pudore et liberalitate liberos
Retinere, satius esse credo, quam metu.

It is better to keep children to their duty by a sense of honor and by kindness than by fear.
q. TERENCE.

Ut quisque suum vult esse, ita est.

As each one wishes his children to be, so they are.
r. TERENCE.

The face is the index of the mind.

PROVERBS AND MOTTOES

CULLED FROM MODERN FOREIGN TONGUES.

FRENCH.

A.

A barbe de fol, on apprend à raser.
Men learn to shave on the beard of a fool.

A bon chat, bon rat.
To a good cat, a good rat.

A bon chien il ne vient jamais un bon os.
A good bone never comes to a good dog.

A bon vin, il ne faut point bouchon.
Good wine needs no bush.

A chemin battu il ne croit point d'herbe.
No grass grows on a beaten road.

Aide toi, le ciel t' aidera.
Help yourself, and Heaven will help you.

A la faim il n' y a point de mauvais pain.
To the hungry no bread is bad.

A la guerre comme à la guerre.
In war according to war.

A l'aise on marche à pied qui mène son cheval par la bride.
'Tis easy to go on foot when one has a horse by the bridle.

A laver la tête d'un âne on perd sa lessive.
He who washes a donkey's head wastes his soap.

Aller en l' autre monde est très-grande sottise,
Tant que dans celui-ci l'on peut être de mise.
It is very foolish to rush into the next world when we can be well placed in this.

Amour fait beaucoup, mais argent fait tout.
Love does much, but money does all.

A petit mercier, petit panier.
For the small trader, a small basket.
A small pack serves a small back.

Après la pluie vient le beau temps.
After a storm comes a calm.

Après la poire, ou le vin ou le prêtre.
After the fruit, wine or the priest.

Après la mort le médecin.
After death the doctor.

Après moi le déluge.
After me the deluge.

Argent fait tout.
Money does all.

Argent reçu, le bras rompu.
The money received, the arm is broken.

Assez consent qui ne mot dit.
Silence is consent.

Assez y a, si trop n' y a.
Enough is as good as a feast.

A tous oiseaux leur nids sont beaux.
Every bird likes its own nest.

Au bon droit.
To the just right.
Motto of the Earl of Egremont.

Au bout du fossé la culbute.
At the end of the ditch, the summerset.

Aujourd' hui roi, demain rien.
To-day King, to-morrow nothing.
Fortune is always changing.

Au regnard endormi rien ne chut en la gueule.
When the fox is asleep, nothing falls into his mouth.

Aussitôt dit, aussitôt fait.
No sooner said than done.

Avoir l'aller pour le venir.
To have the going for the coming.

Aymez loyauté.
Love loyalty.
Motto of the Duke of Bolton.

B.

Bon avocat mauvais voisin.
A good lawyer is a bad neighbor.

Bonne et belle assez.
Good and handsome enough.
Motto of Earl of Fauconberg.

Bonne renommée vaut mieux que ceinture dorée.
A good name is better than a girdle of gold.

Bon jour, bonne œuvre.
Good day, good work.
The Better the Day the Better the Deed.

Bon marché tire l'argent hors de la bourse.
A cheap bargain takes money from the purse.

Boutez en avant.
Push forward.
Motto of the Irish Earl of Barrymore.

Brebis comptées, le loup les mange.
The wolf eats the counted sheep.

Brûler la chandelle par les deux bouts.
Burning the candle at both ends.
Extravagance Leads to Penury.

C.

Celui-là est le mieux servi, qui n'a pas besoin de mettre les mains des autres au bout de ses bras.
The man is best served who has no occasion to put the hands of others at the ends of his arms.

Celui-là qui dévore la substance du pauvre, y trouve à la fin un os qui l'étrangle.
He who devours the substance of the poor will find at length a bone to choke him.

Celui peut hardiment nager à qui l'on soûtient le menton.
He must needs swim that's held up by the chin.

Ce monde est plein de fous; et qui n'en veut pas voir
Doit se renfermer seul, et casser son miroir.
This world is full of fools, and he who would not see one, must shut himself up alone, and break his looking-glass.

Ce n'est pas être bien aisé que de rire.
Laughing is not a proof that the mind is at ease.

Ce qui fait qu'on n'est pas content de sa condition, c'est l'idée chimerique que l'on se forme du bonheur d'autrui.
What makes many persons discontented with their own condition is the absurd idea which they form of the happiness of others.

Ce qui manque aux orateurs en profondeur, Ils vous la donnent en longueur.
What orators want in depth they give you in length.

Ce qui vient par la flute, s'en va par le tambourin.
What comes by the flute, goes away by the tambourine.
Easy come, easy go.

Ce qu'on nomme liberalité n'est souvent que la vanité de donner, que nous aimons mieux que ce que nous donnons.
That which is called liberality is frequently nothing more than the vanity of giving, of which we are more fond than of the thing given.

Ce sont toujours les aventuriers qui font des grandes choses, et non pas les souverains de grandes empires.
It is only adventurers that perform great actions, and not the sovereigns of empires.

C'est une grande folie de vouloir être sage tout seul.
It is great folly to think of being wise alone.

C'est une grande habilité que de savoir cacher son habilité.
The greatest skill is shown in hiding our skill.

Ceux qui n'aiment pas ont rarement de grandes joies; ceux qui aiment ont souvent de grandes tristesses.
Those who do not love seldom feel great joy; those who do love are liable to great sorrow.

Chacun à son goût.
Every man to his taste.

Chacun demande sa sorte.
Each demands his own kind.
Every Jack must have his Gill.

Châteaux en Espagne.
Castles in Spain.
Castles in the air.

Chat échaudé craint l'eau froide.
A scalded cat fears cold water.

Comme je fus.
As I was.
Motto of Viscounts Dudley and Ward.

Craignez honte.
Fear shame.
Motto of Duke of Portland.

Craignez tout d'un auteur en courroux.
Fear the worst from an enraged author.

D.

Dans les conseils d'un état il ne faut pas tant regarder ce qu'on doit faire que ce qu'on peut faire.
In the councils of the state it is not necessary to examine what ought to be done, as what can be done.

Dans un pays libre on crie beaucoup quoiqu' on souffre peu; dans un pays de tyrannie on se plaint peu quoiqu' on souffre beaucoup.
In a free country there is much clamor with little suffering; in a despotic state there is little complaint but much grievance.

De bon commencement bonne fin.
A good beginning makes a good ending.

De bon vouloir servir le roy.
To serve the king with good will.
Motto of Earl Tankerville.

De court plasir long repentir.
Short pleasure, long repentance.

De la main à la bouche, se perd souvent la soupe.
From the hand to the mouth the soup is often lost.

Droit et avant.
Right and forward.
Motto of Viscount Sydney.

D'un dévot souvent au chrétien véritable,
La distance est deux fois plus longue, à mon avis,
Que du pôle antarctique au détroit de Davis.
The distance between a devotee and a true Christian is often twice as great as that from the Southern Pole to Davis Strait.

E.

En Dieu est ma fiance.
In God is my trust.
Motto of Irish Earl Carhampton.

En Dieu est tout.
In God is everything.
Motto of Earl of Strafford.

En la rose je fleuris.
I flourish in the rose.
Motto of the Duke of Richmond.

En parole je vis.
I live in the word.
Motto of Lord Stowell.

En suivant la vérité.
In following truth.
Motto of the Earl of Portsmouth.

En vieillissant, on devient plus fou et plus sage.
When men grow old, they become more foolish and more wise.

Espérance et Dieu.
Hope and God.
Motto of Lord Lovaine.

Espérance en Dieu.
Hope in God.
Motto of Duke of Northumberland.

Être pauvre sans être libre, c' est le pire etat où l' homme puisse tomber.
To be poor without being free is the worst state into which man can fall.

F.

Femme rit quand elle peut, et pleure quand elle veut.
Women laugh when they can, and weep when they will.

Fidélité est de Dieu.
Fidelity is of God.
Motto of the Irish Viscount Powerscourt.

Fol est qui plus dépense que sa rente ne vaut.
He is a fool that spends more money than his receipts.

Foy en tout.
Faith is everything.
Motto of the Earl of Sussex.

Foy pour devoir.
Faith for duty.
Motto of the Duke of Somerset.

G.

Gardez bien.
Take care.
Motto of Scotch Earl of Eglinton.

Gardez la foy.
Keep faith.
Motto of Earl Poulett.

Gardez la foi.
Guard the faith.
Motto of the Irish Baron Kensington.

H.

Haut et bon.
Great and good.
Motto of the Irish Viscount Donéraile.

Honi soit qui mal y pense.
Evil to him who evil thinks.
Motto of Great Britain.

I.

Il a la mer à boire.

He has to drink up the sea.
A great work to accomplish.

Il a le vin mauvais.

He has bad wine.
He is quarrelsome when in his cups.

Il bat le buisson sans prendre l'oiseau.

He beats the bush, and another catches the bird.

Il coûte peu à amasser beaucoup de richesses, et beaucoup à en amasser peu.

It requires but little effort to amass a great deal of riches, but it requires much effort to collect a little.

Il est plus honteux de se défier de ses amis que d'en être trompé.

It is more disgraceful to suspect our friends than to be deceived by them.

Il est temps de fermer l'étable quand les chevaux en sont allés.

When the steed is stolen, it is time to shut the stable door.

Il fait bon battre le fer, tandis qu'il est chaud.

Strike while the iron is hot.

Il faut attendre le boiteux.

It is necessary to wait for the lame man.

Il faut des plus grands vertus pour soutenir la bonne fortune que la mauvaise.

It requires a greater share of virtue to sustain a situation of prosperity, than one of adversity.

Il faut hazarder un petit poisson pour prendre un grand.

Venture a small fish to catch a great one.

Il n'a ni bouche, ni éperon.

He has neither a mouth nor a spur.
He can neither talk nor act.

Il n'appartient qu'aux grands hommes d'avoir de grands défauts.

It belongs only to great men, to possess great defects.

Il n'aura jamais bon marché qui ne le demande pas.

You will never buy cheap if you don't ask the price.

Il n 'est sauce que d'appétit.

Hunger is the best sauce.

Il ne faut pas jetter les marguerites devant les pourceaux.

You must not throw pearls before swine.

Il ne faut pas parler de corde dans la maison d' un pendu.

Do not speak of a rope in the house of one who was hanged.

Il ne sait sur quel pied danser.

He knows not on which leg to dance.

Il n'y a point au monde un si pénible métier que celui de se faire un grand nom; la vie s'achève avant que l'on a à peine ébauché son ouvrage.

There is not in the world so difficult a task as that of getting a great name. Life is closed, when the work is scarcely begun.

Il n'y a point des gens qui sont plus méprisés que les petits beaux esprits et les grands sans probité.

There are no people so much despised as men of small wit, and those of rank without probity.

Il n'y a point d'homme vertueux qui n'ait quelque vice, et de méchant qui n'ait quelque vertu.

There is no virtuous man without some vice, or any wicked man who has not some virtue.

Il n'y a que le matin en toutes choses.

The duration of all things is but as the morning.

Il sent de fagot.

He smells of the faggot.
He is known by his trade.

Il vaut mieux plier que rompre.

Better to bend than break.

Il vaut mieux tâcher d'oublier ses malheurs que d'en parler.

It is much better for a man to forget his misfortunes than to talk of them.

Il vaut mieux tard que jamais.

Better late than never.

Il y a anguille sous roche.

There is an eel under the rock.
If you wish to find you must search.

Il y a des gens à qui la vertu sied presque aussi mal que le vice.

There are some persons on whom virtue sits almost as ungraciously as vice.

Il y a des gens dégoutants avec du mérite; et d'autres qui plaisent avec des défauts.

There are people of merit who are disgusting, and there are others who please with all their defects.

Il y a des reproches qui louent, et des louanges qui médisent.

There are some reproaches which commend, and some praises which slander.

Il y a plus d' un âne à la foire qui s' appelle Martin.

There is more than one donkey at the fair whose name is Martin.

J.

J'ai bonne cause.

I have a good cause.

Motto of the Marquis of Bath.

J'ai eu toujours pour principe de ne faire jamais par autrui ce que je pouvais faire par moi-même.

I have ever held it as a maxim, never to do that through another, which it was possible for me to do myself.

Jamais arrière.

Never behind.

Motto of the Scotch Earl of Selkirk.

Je le tiens.

I hold it.

Motto of Lord Audley.

Je ne cherche qu'un.

I seek but for one.

Motto of the Earl of Northampton.

Je n'oublierai jamais.

I shall never forget.

Motto of the Earl of Bristol.

Je pense.

I think.

Motto of the Scotch Earl of Wemyss.

Je suis prêt.

I am ready.

Motto of the Irish Earl of Farnham.

Jeu de main, jeu de vilain.

Practical jokes belong only to the low classes.

Jeune on conserve pour la viellesse: vieux on épargne pour la mort.

When young, men lay up for old age; when aged, they hoard for death.

Jour de ma vie.

The day of my life.

Motto of Earl Delawar.

L.

La beauté de l'esprit donne de l'admiration, celle de l'âme donne de l'estime, et celle du corps de l'amour.

The charms of wit excite admiration, those of the heart impress esteem, and those of the body lead to love.

La beauté sans vertu est une fleur sans parfum.

Beauty without virtue is a flower without perfume.

La chaumière est un palais au pauvre.

The cottage is a palace to the poor.

La clémence des princes n'est souvent qu' une politique pour gagner l'affection des peuples.

The clemency of princes is frequently nothing more than a measure of policy, to gain the affections of the people.

La confidence fournit plus à la conversation que l' esprit.

Confidence furnishes more to conversation than wit or talent.

La cour ne rend pas content; mais elle empêche qu'on ne le soit ailleurs.

The court does not make a man happy, but it prevents a man from enjoying happiness elsewhere.

L'adresse surmonte la force.

Policy goes further than strength.

La décence est le teint naturel de la vertu et le fard du vice.

Decency is the genuine tint of virtue and the disguise of vice.

La docte antiquité fut toujours vénérable,
Je ne la trouve pas cependant adorable.

The learning of antiquity was always venable, but it is not therefore sacred.

L'adversité fait l'homme, et le bonheur les monstres.

Adversity makes men, and prosperity makes monsters.

La faiblesse de l'ennemi fait notre propre force.

The weakness of the enemy makes our own strength.

La femme de bien n'a ni yeux ni oreilles.

Discreet women have neither eyes nor ears.

La grande sagesse de l'homme consiste à connaître ses folies.

The great wisdom in man consists in knowing his follies.

La libéralité consiste moins à donner beaucoup qu'à donner à propos.

Liberality consists less in giving much than in giving seasonably.

L'allegorie habite un palais diaphane.

Allegory dwells in a transparent place.

La maladie sans maladie.

Disease without a disease.

The hypocondriac.

La marque d'un mérite extraordinaire, c'est de voir que ceux que le'envient le plus sont contraints de le louer.

The proof of extraordinary merit is to see that it extorts praise from those who envy it.

La moitié du monde prend plaisir à médire et l'autre moitié à croire les médisantes.

One half the world takes a pleasure in slander, the other half in believing the slanderers.

L'amour de la justice n'est en la plupart des hommes que la crainte de souffrir l'injustice.

The love of justice is in most men nothing more than the fear of suffering injustice.

L'amour est une passion que vient souvent sans savoir comment, et qui s'en va au juste de même.

Love is a passion which frequently comes we know not how, and which quits us exactly in the same manner.

L'amour et la fumée
Ne peuvent se cacher.

Love and smoke cannot be hidden.

La moquerie est souvent une indigence d'esprit.

Jesting is often a poverty of understanding.

La mort est plus aisée à supporter sans y penser, que la pensée de la mort sans péril.

Death is itself more easy to encounter without reflection, than the thought of death without danger.

L'amour-propre est le plus grand de tous les flatteurs.

Self-love is the greatest of all flatterers.

La nuit donne conseil.

Night gives counsel.

La nuit tous les chats sont gris.

At night all cats are gray.
All colors are alike in the dark.

Là où Dieu veut il pleut.

Where God wishes it rains.
When God pleases unlikely things turn to our advantage.

La parfaite valeur est de faire sans témoins ce qu'on serait capable de faire devant tout le monde.

True courage is shown by doing, without witnesses, that which a man is capable of doing before the world.

La passion fait souvent un fou du plus habile homme, et rend souvent habiles les plus sots.

Love often makes a fool of the cleverest men, and as often gives cleverness to the most foolish.

La patience est amère, mais son fruit est doux.

Patience is bitter, but its fruit is sweet.

La philosophie, qui nous promet de nous rendre heureux, nous trompe.

Philosophy, which promises to render us happy, deceives us.

La philosophie triomphe aisément des maux passés et de maux à venir; mais les maux présents triomphent d'elle.

Philosophy easily triumphs over the misfortunes which are past and to come; but those which are present triumph over her.

La plupart des hommes n'ont pas le courage de corriger les autres, parceque ils n'ont pas le courage de souffrir qu'on les corrige.

The generality of mankind have not sufficient courage to correct others, because they themselves have not fortitude to suffer correction.

La réputation d'un homme est comme son ombre, qui tantôt le suive, et tantôt le précède: quelquefois elle est plus longue et quelquefois plus courte que lui.

The reputation of a man is like his shadow; it sometimes follows or precedes him; it is sometimes longer, and sometimes shorter, than himself.

L'argent est un bon serviteur et un méchant maître.

Money is a good servant, but a bad master.

L'art de vaincre est celui de mépriser la mort.

The art of conquering is that of despising death.

La science du gouvernment n'est qu'une science de combinaisons, d'applications et déceptions, selon les temps, les lieux, les circonstances.

The science of government is only a science of combinations, of applications, and of deceptions, according to times, places, and circumstances.

La vérité ne fait pas autant de bien dans le monde, que ses apparences y font de mal.

Truth does not so much good in the world, as its appearances do evil.

La vertu dans l'indigence est comme un voyageur, que le vent et la pluie contraignent de s'envelopper de son manteau.

Virtue in indigence is like a traveller who is compelled, by the wind and rain, to wrap himself up in his cloak.

La vertu est la seule noblesse.

Virtue only is nobility.

La vertu n'irait pas si loin si la vanité ne lui tenait compagnie.

Virtue would not go so far, if vanity did not bear it company.

Le bonheur de l'homme en cette vie ne consiste pas à être sans passions, il consiste à en être le maître.

The happiness of man in this life does not consist in the absence, but in the mastery of his passions.

Le bonheur ou le malheur des hommes ne dépend pas moins de leur humeur que de la fortune.

The good or bad fortunes of men depend not less on their own disposition than on chance.

Le bon temps viendra.

The good time will come.
Motto of Earl Harcourt.

Le cœur d'une femme est un vrai miroir qui reçoit toutes sortes d'objets sans s'attacher à aucun.

The heart of a woman is a real mirror, which reflects every object without attaching itself to any.

Le cœur ne veut douloir ce que l'œil ne peut voir.

What the eye sees not, the heart will not complain of.

Les consolations indiscrètes ne font qu'aigrir les violentes afflictions.

Indiscreet consolation only irritates affliction.

Le coût en ôte le goût.

The cost takes away the taste.

Le grand œuvre.

The great work.
The philosopher's stone.

Le jeu est le fils d'avarice, et le père du désespoir.

Gaming is the son of avarice, and the father of despair.

Le mérite est souvent un obstacle à la fortune, et la raison de cela c'est qu'il produit toujours deux mauvais effets, l'envie et la crainte.

Merit is often an obstacle to success, for the reason that it ever produces two bad effects, envy and fear.

Le mieux est l'ennemi du bien.

The best is the enemy of well.
We forget what we have, in seeking something better.

Le moineau en la main vaut mieux que l'oie qui vole.

A sparrow in the hand is better than a goose on the wing.

Le monde est le livre des femmes.

The world is the book of women.

Le moyen le plus sûr de se consoler de tout ce qui peut arriver c'est d'attendre toujours au pire.

The most certain consolation against all that can happen is always to expect the worst.

L'ennui du beau, amène le goût du singulier.

A disgust for that which is proper, leads to a taste for singularity.

Le pays du mariage a cela de particulier, que les étrangers ont envie de l'habiter, et les habitans naturels voudraient en être exilés.

The land of marriage has this peculiarity, that strangers are desirous of inhabiting it, whilst its natural inhabitants would willingly be exiled from it.

Le petit gain remplit la bourse.

Light gains make a heavy purse.

Le plus lent à promettre est toujours le plus fidèle à tenir.

The man who is most slow in promising, is most sure to keep his word.

Le refus des louanges est souvent un désir d'être loué deux fois.

The refusal of praise is often a desire for a double portion.

Le roi et l'état.

The king and the State.
Motto of Earl Ashburnham.

Le roi le veut.

The king wills it.
Motto of Lord Clifford.

Les absents ont toujours tort.

The absent are always at fault.

Le sage entend demi mot.

The sensible man understands half a word.

Le sage songe avant que de parler à ce qui il doit dire, le fou parle et ensuite songe à ce qu'il a dit.

A wise man thinks before he speaks; but a fool speaks and then thinks of what he has been saying.

Le savoir faire.

The knowledge how to act.
Ability, skill.

Les eaux sont basses chez lui.

The waters are low with him.
Fortune is at ebb tide.

Le secret d'ennuyer est celui de tout dire.

The secret of tiring is to say all that can be said.

Les femmes peuvent tout, parcequ'elles gouvernent les personnes qui gouvernent tous.

Women can do everything, because they rule those who command everything.

Les femmes sont extrêmes; elles sont meilleures ou pires que les hommes.

Women are extreme. They are either better or worse than the men.

Les fous font des festins, et les sages les mangent.

Fools make feasts, and wise men eat them.

Les gens qui ont peu d'affaires sont de très grands parleurs. Moins on pense, plus on parle.

Men who have little business are great talkers. The less one thinks, the more one speaks.

Les grands noms abaissent, au lieu d'élever, ceux qui ne les savent pas soutenir.

Great names debase, instead of raising, those who know not how to sustain them.

Les hommes sont la cause que les femmes ne s'aiment point.

It is the men that cause the women to dislike each other.

Le silence est la vertu de ceux qui ne sont pas sages.

Silence is the virtue of those who are not wise.

Le silence est le parti le plus sûr de celui, qui se défie de soimême.

To be silent is the safest choice for the man who distrusts his own powers.

Les jeunes gens disent ce qu'ils font, les vieillards ce qu'ils ont fait, et les sots ce qu'ils ont envie de faire.

Young folks tell what they do, old ones what they have done, and fools what they intend to do.

Les larrons s'entrebattent, les larcins se découvrent.

When thieves fall out, thefts are discovered.

Le soleil ni la mort ne peuvent se regarder fixement.

Neither the sun nor death can be looked upon with fixed attention.

Les passions sont les vents qui font aller notre vaisseau, et la raison est le pilote qui le conduit; le vaisseau n'irait point sans les vents, et se perdrait sans le pilote.

The passions are the winds which urge our vessel forward, and reason is the pilot which steers it; the vessel could not advance without the winds, and without the pilot it would be lost.

L'espérance est le songe d'un homme éveillé.

Hope is the dream of a man awake.

L'esprit a son ordre, qui est par principes et démonstrations; le cœur en a un autre.

The mind has its methods; it proceeds from principles to demonstrations. The heart has a different mode of proceeding.

L'esprit est toujours la dupe du cœur.

The understanding is ever the dupe of the heart.

Les querelles ne dureraient pas longtemps si le tort n'était que d'un côté.

Disputes would not continue so long, if the wrong lay but on one side.

Les rats se promenent à l'aise, là où il n'y a point de chats.

When the cat is away, the mice will play.

Le travail du corps délivre des peines de l'esprit; et c'est ce qui rend les pauvres heureux.

Bodily labor relieves mental fatigue, and this forms the happiness of the poor.

Le travail éloigne de nous trois grands maux: l'ennui, le vice, et le besoin.

Labor rids us of three great evils—tediousness, vice and poverty.

Le vrai moyen d'être trompé, c'est de se croire plus fin que les autres.

The sure mode of being deceived, is to believe ourselves more cunning than others.

L'hypocrisie est un hommage que le vice rend à la vertu.

Hypocrisy is the homage which vice renders to virtue.

Liberté toute entière.

Liberty complete.

Motto of the Irish Earl of Lanesborough.

L'imagination gallope, le jugement ne va que le pas.

The imagination gallops; judgment only goes a foot-pace.

L'industrie des hommes s'épuise à briguer les charges; il ne leur en reste plus pour en remplir les devoirs.

The industry of men is exhausted in canvassing for places, none is left for fulfilling the duties of them.

L'on espère de vieillir et l'on craint la vieillesse; c'est à dire, on aime la vie, et on fuit la mort.

We hope to get old, and yet are afraid of age; in other words we are in love with life, and wish to fly from death.

Louer les princes, des vertus qu' ils n'ont pas, c'est leur dire impunément des injures.

To praise princes for virtues which they have not, is to reproach them with impunity.

Loyal devoir.

Loyal duty.

Motto of Lord Corteret.

Loyal je serai durant ma vie.

I shall be loyal during my life.

Motto of Lord Stourt.

Loyauté n'a honte.

Loyalty has no shame.

Motto of Duke of Newcastle.

Loyauté m'oblige.

Loyalty binds me.

Motto of Duke of Ancaster.

L'une des marques de la médiocrité de l'esprit est de toujours conter.

One of the marks of mediocrity of understanding, is to be always telling stories.

M.

Maintien le droit.

Maintain the right.

Motto of Lord Chandos.

Malheur ne vient jamais seul.

Misfortunes seldom come alone.

Marchandise qui plaît est à demi vendue.

The goods which please are already half-sold.

Marie ton fils quand tu voudras, mais ta fille quand tu pourras.

Marry your son when you please, and your daughter when you can.

Mauvaise est la saison quand un loup mange l'autre.

'Tis a hard winter, when one wolf eats another.

Mauvaise herbe croît toujours.

Ill weeds grow a-pace.

Méchant ouvrier, jamais ne trouvera bons outils.

A bad workman always quarrels with his tools.

Mieux vaut un once de fortune qu'une livre de sagesse.

Better an ounce of fortune than a pound of wisdom.

Mieux vaut un "tiens" que deux "tu l'auras."

One "take this" is better than two "thou shalt have."

A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.

N.

Né pour la digestion.

Born for the benefit of digestion.

Ne remettez pas à demain ce que vous pouvez faire aujourd' hui.

Do not defer until to-morrow, what you can do to-day.

Noblesse oblige.

Nobility has its obligations.

Rank inpresses duty.

Notre mal s'empoisonne
Du secours qu'on lui donne.

Our disease is aggravated by the remedies which are given.

N'oubliez.

Do not forget.

Motto of the Scotch Earl Graham.

Nous aurions souvent honte de nos plus belles actions, si le monde voyait tous les motifs qui les produisent.

We should often be ashamed of our brightest actions, were the world but to see the motives by which they are produced.

Nous avons tous assez de force pour supporter les maux d'autrui.

We all have sufficient strength to bear the misfortunes of others.

Nous désirerions peu de choses avec ardeur, si nous connaissions parfaitement ce que nous désirons.

We should wish for few things with eagerness, if we perfectly knew the object of our desire.

Nous ne savons ce que c'est que bonheur ou malheur absolu.

We do not know what is absolutely good or bad fortune.

Nous ne trouvons guère de gens de bon sens que ceux qui sont de notre avis.

We seldom find persons of good sense, but such as are of our opinion.

Nul bien sans peine.

Nothing is gained without work.

Nul n'aura de l'esprit,
Hors nous et nos amis.

No person shall be allowed to have wit outside of us and our friends.

O.

On connait l'ami au besoin.

A friend is known in time of need.

O l'utile secret que de mentir à propos!

Oh! what a useful secret it is to be able to lie to the purpose.

On a beau mener le bœuf à l'eau s'il n'a soif.

In vain do you lead the ox to the water if he is not thirsty.

On commence par être dupe, on finit par être fripon.

One begins by being a fool and ends in being a knave.

On dit des gueux qu'ils ne sont jamais dans leur chemin, parcequ'ils n'ont point de demeure fixe. Il en est de même de ceux qui disputent, sans avoir de notions dérterminées.

It is said of beggars that they are never on their way, because they have no fixed abode. It is the same with those who argue without having any fixed ideas.

On fait souvent tort à la verité par la manière dont on se sert pour la défendre.

Injury is often done to the cause of truth by the manner in which it is defended.

On n'a jamais bon marché de mauvaise marchandise.

No one has a good market for bad merchandise.

On ne cherche point à prouver la lumiére.

There is no necessity for proving the existence of light.

On ne loué d'ordinaire que pour être loué.

Praise is generally given that it may be returned.

On ne méprise pas tous ceux qui ont des vices, mais on méprise tous ceux qui n'ont aucune vertu.

We do not despise all those who have vices ; but we despise those who are without any virtue.

On peut attirer les cœurs par les qualités qu'on montre, mais on ne les fixe que par celles qu'on a.

Hearts may be attracted by assumed qualities, but the affections are fixed only by those which are real.

Oublier je ne puis.

I cannot forget.

Motto of Scotch Baron Colville.

Oui et non, sont bien courts à dire, mais avant que de les dire, il y faut penser longtemps.

Yes and no are very easily said, but before they are said it is necessary to think a long time.

On ne se blâme, que pour être loué.

Men only blame themselves for the purpose of being praised.

On n'est jamais si ridicule par les qualités que l'on a, que par celles que l'on affecte d'avoir.

Men are never so ridiculous from the qualities which really belong to them, as from those which they pretend to have.

On ne prend pas le lièvre au tambourin.

A hare is not caught with a drum.

On perd tout le temps qu'on peut mieux employer.

All that time is lost which might be better employed.

On prend le peuple par les oreilles, comme on fait un pot par les anses.

The people are taken by the ears as a pot is by the handles.

On touche toujours sur le cheval qui tire.

The horse that draws is most whipped.

P.

Pain tant qu'il dure, vin à mesure.

Eat at pleasure, drink by measure.

Par les mèmes voies on ne va pas toujours aux mêmes fins.

By the same means we do not always arrive at the same ends.

Parlez du loup et vous verrez sa queue.

Speak of the wolf, and you will see his tail.

Patience passe science.

Patience surpasses knowledge.

Motto of Viscount Falmouth.

Pauvres gens, je les plains, car on a pour les fous
Plus de pitié que de courroux.

Poor gentlemen, I pity them ; for one always entertains for fools more pity than anger.

Peu de bien, peu de soin.

Little wealth little care.

Peu de gens savent être vieux.

Few persons know how to be old.

Pense à bien.

Think for the best.

Motto of Viscount Wentworth.

Plus près est la chair que la chemise.

The skin fits closer than the shirt.

Pour bien désirer.

To desire good.

Motto of Lord Docre.

Pour connaître le prix de l'argent, il faut être oblige d'en emprunter.

To know the value of money, one must be obliged to borrow it.

Pour s'etablir dans le monde, on fait tout ce que l'on peut pour y paraître établi.

To establish himself in the world a man makes every effort to appear already established.

Pour y parvenir.

To attain the object.

Motto of the Duke of Rutland.

Précept commence, exemple achève.

Precept begins, example completes.

Prendre la lune avec les dents.

To seize the moon with one's teeth.

An effort to attain the impossible.

Prend moi tel que je suis.

Take me just as I am.

Motto of the Irish Viscount Loftus.

Prêt d'accomplir.
Ready to perform.
Motto of the Earl of Shrewsbury.

Prêt pour mon pays.
Ready for my country.
Motto of Lord Monson.

Q.

Quand on ne trouve pas son repos en soi même, il est inutile de le chercher ailleurs.
When a man does not find repose in himself, it is vain for him to seek it elsewhere.

Querelle d'allemand.
A German quarrel.
A Quarrel without reason.

Qui a bruit de se lever matin, peut dormir jusqu'a diner.
He who has the reputation of rising early, may sleep till noon.

Qui aime Jean aime son chien.
Who loves John, loves his dog.
Love me, love my dog.

Qui compte sans son hôte, il lui convient compter deux fois.
He that reckons without his host, must reckon again.

Qui dit docteur, ne dit pas toujours un homme docte, mais un homme qui devrait être docte.
He who speaks of a doctor does not always speak of a learned man, but only of a man who ought to be learned.

Qui est plus esclave qu'un courtisan assidu, si ce n'est un courtisan plus assidu?
Who can be a greater slave than the assiduous courtier, if not the one who is still more assiduous?

Qui garde son diner il a mieux à souper.
He that saves his dinner will have more for his supper.

Qui n'a cœur, ait jambes.
Let him that has no heart have legs.

Qui n'a point de sens à trente ans, n' en aura jamais.
He who has not wisdom at the age of thirty will never have it.

Qui perd, pêche.
He who loses, sins.

Qui pense?
Who thinks?
Motto of the Irish Earl of Howth.

Qui premier arriver au moulin, premier doit moudre.
He who arrives first at the mill should first get his grist.
First come, first served.

Qui prête à l'ami perd au double.
He who lends his money to a friend, is sure to lose both.

Qui se couche avec les chiens, se lève avec des puces.
Who lies down with dogs, rises with fleas.

Qui trop se hâte en cheminant, en beau chemin se fourvoye souvent.
He that walks too hastily, often stumbles in plain way.

Qui veut prendre un oiseau, qu'il ne l'effarouche.
To frighten a bird is not the way to catch it.

Qui vin ne boit apres salade, est en danger d'être malade.
He that drinks not wine after salad is in danger of being sick.

R.

Revenons à nos moutons.
Let us return to the mutton.
Let us resume the subject.

Rien de plus estimable que la cerémonie.
Nothing is of more value than civility.

Rien n'empêche tant d'être naturel que l'envie de le paraître.
Nothing prevents a person from being natural so much as the desire of appearing such.

Rira bien, qui rira le dernier.
He laughs well who laughs last.

S.

Sans Dieu rien.
Without God, nothing.
Motto of Lord Petre.

Sans les femmes les deux extrémités de la vie seraient sans secours, et le milieu sans plaisirs.
Without woman the two extremities of life would be without help and the middle of it without pleasure.

Selon le pain il faut le couteau.
According to the bread must be the knife.

Si ceux, qui sont enemis des divertissements honnêtes, avaient la direction du monde, ils voudraient ôter le printemps et la jeunesse—l'un de l'année et l'autre de la vie.
If those who are the enemies of innocent amusements had the direction of the world, they would take away spring and youth—the former from the year, the latter from life.

Si le ciel tombait les cailles seraient prises.
If the sky falls we shall catch larks.

Si nous ne nous flattions pas nous-mêmes, la flatterie des autres ne nous pourrait nuire.

If we did not flatter ourselves, the flattery of others could do us no harm.

Si souhaits furent vrais, pastoreaux seraient rois.

If wishes were true, farmers would be kings.

Soyez ferme.

Be firm.

Motto of the Irish Earl of Carrick.

Suivez raison.

Follow reason.

Motto of the Irish Earl Altamont, Viscount Montague, and Lord Kilmaine.

T.

Tâche sans tache.

A work without a stain.

The Motto of the Scotch Earl of Northesk.

Tant souvent va le pot a l'eau que l'anse y demeure.

The pitcher doth not go so often to the water, but the handle is broken at last.

Tel en vous lisant, admire chaque trait,
Qui dans le fond de l'âme et vous craint et vous hait.

Such a one, on reading your work, admires every stroke, but from the bottom of his soul he fears and hates you.

Telle brille au second rang qui s'éclipse au premier.

A man may shine in the second rank, who would be eclipsed in the first.

Tel maître, tel valet.

As the master so the valet.

Like master, like man.

Tiens ta foy.

Keep thy faith.

Motto of Earl Bathurst.

Toujours prêt.

Always ready.

Motto of the Irish Marquis of Antrim and Earl Clanwilliam.

Toujours propice.

Always propitious.

Motto of the Irish Viscount Cremorne.

Tous les hommes sont fous, et malgré leur soins
Ne diffèrent entr'eux, que du plus ou du moins.

All men are fools, and in spite of every effort, they only differ in degree.

Tout bien ou rien.

The whole or nothing.

Motto of Earl Gainsborough.

Tout ce qui luit n'est pas or.

All is not gold that glitters.

Tout éloge imposteur blesse une âme sincère.

An honest man is hurt by praise unjustly bestowed.

Tout le monde se plaint de sa mémoire, et personne ne plaint de son jugment.

Every man complains of his memory, but no man complains of his judgment.

U.

Un averti en vaut deux.

A person warned is worth two.

Un barbier rase l'autre.

One barber shaves another.

A Roland for an Oliver.

Un clou pousse l'autre.

One nail drives out another.

Un enfant en ouvrant ses yeux doit voir la patrie, et jusqu'à la mort ne voir qu'elle.

The infant, on first opening his eyes, ought to see his country, and to the hour of his death never lose sight of it.

Un homme d'esprit serait souvent bien embarrassé sans la compagnie des sots.

A man of wit may be often much embarrassed without the company of fools.

Un homme toujours satisfait de lui-même, l'est peu souvent des autres, rarement on l'est de lui.

A man who is always well satisfied with himself, is seldom so with others, and others are as little pleased with him.

Un je servirai

One I will serve.

Motto of Earl Pembroke and Lord Porchester.

Un Roy, une foy, une loy.

One King, one faith, one law.

Motto of the Irish Marquis of Clanricarde.

Un sac perce ne peut tenir le grain.

A broken sack will hold no corn.

Un sot trouve toujours un plus sot qui l'admire.

A fool always finds a greater fool to admire him.

Un tout seul.

One alone.

Motto of the Irish Earl Verney.

ECCLESIASTICAL TERMS AND DEFINITIONS.

CHRISTIAN CHURCHES.

AGATHON. The mass as the only continuing good bestowed on mortals.

AGNUS DEI. "The Lamb of God." The name given to a cake of wax stamped with the figure of a lamb bearing the banner of the cross which is supposed to possess great virtue, being consecrated by the pope, with great solemnity. These cakes are distributed to the people who cover themselves with a piece of stuff the shape of a heart and carry them devoutly in their processions.

AISE. A linen napkin used for covering the chalice.

ALB. Lat. Albus. The second vestment worn by the priest; a large, loose garment of white linen entirely covering the body and secured at the neck by means of strings. It was formerly made of colored silk, and on festival occasions of cloth of gold.

ALLELUIA OR HALLELU-JAH. "Praise the Lord" or 'Praise to the Lord." This was sung by the Jews on solemn days of rejoicing, and is also used in the Roman Catholic church during Easter season, but never in times of mourning, except in masses for the dead.

ALL SAINTS' DAY. In 610 Pope Boniface III. ordered that the heathen temple Pantheon should be made a Christian church, which was done and it was dedicated to All Martyrs and so came to be called All Saints. The day then celebrated was May 1st, but in 834 was changed to November 1st. It was often called Allhallows day and Hallow E'en in Scotland, and Holy Eve in Ireland is the Eve of All Saints' Day.

ALL SOULS. A festival in the Roman Catholic church when special prayers are offered for All Souls departed. The day set apart is November 2nd.

ALMS-CHEST. A chest placed in the church for the reception of alms.

ALTAR. Lat. Altus and Ara. The sacred table on which the Mass is offered. It should be by rule, three and a half feet high, six and a half feet long and three feet wide. Properly it should be made of stone but variations are allowed.

ALTAR CLOTH. A covering for the table provided for the celebration of the Holy Communion. It is usually of silk, but at the time of ministration is of linen.

ALTAR PIECE. A picture placed over the altar.

ALTAR RAILS. By the order of Archbishop Laud the position of the holy table was changed from the middle to the east end of the chancel and was there protected by rails.

ALTAR SCREEN. A screen placed back of the altar bounding the presbytery on the east. In larger churches it separates it from the parts left free for processions between the presbytery and the Lady chapel when the latter is at the east end.

AMBO, THE. An elevated lectern or pulpit used in the early church for chanting the Epistle. Many churches possessed two, one for chanting the Epistle and one for chanting the Gospel; still one served for both purposes in most cases.

AMICE. Lat. Amicire. A rectangular piece of linen about three feet long and two feet wide, having a string at each of its two upper corners by which it is fastened on the shoulders of the wearer. There is a cross in the centre of the upper edge, which the priest kisses when vesting. It was used as a covering for the neck and head until about the tenth century when the ecclesiastical cap or berretta supplied its place.

ANABATA. The garment covering the back and shoulders of the priest.

ANAPHORA. The mass, so-called in ancient times because it raises the thoughts to Heaven, anaphora meaning a mounting or rising up.

ANGELUS DOMINE. Short prayers which Catholics are called upon to use three times each day at the ringing of the church bell. In some places the times are sunrise, noon and sunset, but the general custom is to ring the angelus at 6 o'clock morning and evening and at noon. It is thought by some that this custom originated during the Crusades, in order to establish uniformity in hours of prayer, but others credit it to Pope John XXII in 1327.

ANNATES. Called "First Fruits." These were the profits of one year of every unoccupied bishopric in England. They were first claimed by the pope for defending Christians from infidels, and were paid by each bishop on his accession, and till that was done he could not receive his investiture from Rome. Now it is payable by the clergy in general.

ANTHEM. A hymn sung in parts, alternately. It is often applied to a short sentence sung before and after one of the Psalms of the day.

ANTIDORON. The name given to a large quantity of bread which is blessed before the Mass and placed on one of the side altars for distribution to those who for some valid reason, cannot approach the regular communion.

ANTIMENS. Also written ANTIMINS. Pieces of stuff, generally silk, about sixteen inches square and having a figure of the burial of our Lord by Joseph of Arimathea stamped upon them. They are held in great veneration and are consecrated with much ceremony, also having the Office of the Holy Eucharist celebrated on them for seven consecutive days.

ANTIPENDIUM. An appendage to be hung before the altar when it is made of any material but stone.

ANTIPHON. Alternate singing of a choir and congregation, the most ancient form of church music.

ANTIPHONAR. The book containing all that is sung by the choir, except the hymns devoted to the Communion service, which are contained in the Gradual or Grail.

ANTIPHONARY. A book composed of the Introit, Graduals, Offertories, Communions, etc.

APSE. Also called APIS. A semi-circular termination of the choir or any other part of the church.

ARCADE. A series of arches, supported by pillars either belonging to the building or used in relieving large surfaces of masonry.

ARCHBISHOP. The chief of the clergy in a whole province, and having the care of the bishops and inferior officers of that province and also the right to deprive them for flagrant offences.

ARCHDEACON. A priest who presides over an archdeaconry or a division of a diocese.

ARCHES, COURT OF. An ancient court of appeal belonging to the Archbishop of Canterbury, the judge of which was called the Dean of Arches, as the court was held in the church of St. Mary de Arcubus.

ASPERGILLUM. An implement resembling a brush used for sprinkling holy water over objects to be blessed.

AUDIENCE, COURT OF. A court belonging to the Archbishop of Canterbury where he disposed of those matters which he reserved for his own hearing.

AUMBRIE. A small closet.

BAND. A linen ornament worn about the neck by clergymen. It is also worn by the scholars at Winchester, etc., and was formerly worn with the surplice by singing men, lay vicars and occasionally by parish clerks.

BASIN. "Whilst the sentences for the Offertory are in reading, the deacons, churchwardens, and other fit persons appointed for that purpose, shall receive the alms for the poor and other devotions of the people, in a decent basin, to be provided by the parish for that purpose."

Rubric.

BELLS. The use of bells in religious services is very ancient, dating back to the time of the writing of the book of Exodus. They were used by the Jews to summon the priests to the service, the Levites to sing, and the men to bring the unclean to the gate called Micanor. Before bells came into general use in the church, sounding boards struck with a mallet of hard wood and called semantrous supplied their place, and these are still in use in some of the Oriental churches. Bells are not rung during the last days of Holy Week, and hence it is sometimes called Still Week. During this time small wooden clappers are used.

BENEDICITE. A canticle so named because it so commences in the Latin version. It is also called the Song of the Three Children as Hananiah, Mishæl and Abednego are said to have sung it in the fiery furnace. It is used at Morning Prayer, after the first lesson.

BERRETTA. A square cap with three corners rising from the crown and having a tassel hanging. It was worn as early as the ninth century, when it had no corners, but resembled an ordinary cap; but its pliability making it difficult to place properly on the head, the shape was changed to the present one, the three corners being symbolical of the Blessed Trinity. It is of two colors, red and black: red being worn by cardinals and without a tassel, and black by all inferior officers, a bishop's having a green lining. The berretta beside daily use, can be worn in the sanctuary during the less solemn portions of the mass. As worn by the Greeks it is round and close fitting and is generally of a violet color. Fastened to the back is a triangular piece called περιστερχ or the dove, from its resemblance to the tail of that bird. The Greek bishops never wear a mitre, but use a low hat without a peak, over which is thrown a large veil.

BREVIARY. A compilation in an abbreviated form of the different books anciently used in the service of the Roman Catholic church.

BURSE. The receptacle for the Corporal and Pall when not in use, corresponding in color and material with the vestments and having a cross worked in the centre.

CANDLES. On every altar for the celebration of Mass there are placed near the crucifix two candle-sticks containing candles of pure wax, which are kept burning during the service. At Solemn High Mass, six are required, at Low Mass, four. An ordinary priest uses only two.

CANON. A law of the church. The derivation of the word, which is Greek, signifies a rule or measure.

CARDS, ALTAR. Three cards placed on the altar to assist the memory of the priest. The first contains the Gloria in Excelsis and Credo, the prayers said at the offertory, the Qui Pridie, the form of consecration and the Placeat. The others contain minor prayers used in the service.

CASSOCK. Lat. Vestis talaris. A long outer garment, the ordinary dress of priests, the color of which varies. Cardinals wear red, except in times of penance and mourning, when they wear violet. The bishop's Cassock is violet, except on the occasions mentioned, when it is black, but priests of no particular order wear black. The pope's cassock is always white silk.

CATHEDRAL. Lat. Cathedra, a chair. The principal church in a diocese, and so called because there the bishop has his seat or throne.

CENSER. The modern designation of the Thurible.

CHALICE. The Eucharistic cup in which is placed the wine for consecration, and generally in shape resembling a lily. It is usually made of silver or gold; wood, brass and glass being forbidden, except where the need is very great. The ornamentation is generally some scene taken from our Lord's life.

CHANCEL. Lat. Cancelli. That part of the church which contains the holy table and stalls for the clergy.

CHANT. Ecclesiastical music. The most solemn chants in the Catholic church are attributed to St. Ambrose and St. Gregory.

CHASUBLE. This garment is the last in the catalogue of sacred vestments. It is open at both sides, reaching to the knees in front of the priest and extending a few inches longer at the back. It is composed of precious cloth, and the colors are the five mentioned in the rubrics, viz: white, red, violet, green and black.

CHIMERE. The outer garment worn by a bishop, to which the lawn sleeves are generally fastened.

CHRISTE ELEISON. Christ have mercy on us.

CIBORIUM. A cup resembling the chalice, only more shallow and wide, and used when the number of communicants is great.

CINCTURE. A linen girdle sufficiently long to encircle, when doubled, the body of the priest, and worn to keep the Alb in place. Formerly it was made of costly materials, studded with gems and was broad like a sash. That worn by the Oriental priest is much broader and fastened around the waist by a gilt hook, shaped like an S.

CŒNOBITES. Gr. Koivo Biov. Monks having a fixed habitation and forming an association under a chief called Father or Abbot.

COLLAR. A strip of thin linen two inches in width and long enough to encircle the neck of the wearer. This is folded over a circular band of partially stiff material and to this is sewed a piece of cloth about large enough to cover the chest. It is kept in position by being buttoned in the back or fastened to the neck by strings. It is three colors: red for Cardinals, violet for bishops, and black for priests.

COLLECTS. Short prayers found in all liturgies and public devotional offices.

COLOBION. A garment worn by the Greek priests corresponding to the Dalmatic of the Catholic church, but different in being without sleeves and covered with small crosses.

CONCLAVE. The cardinals' place of meeting for the choosing of a new pope. For some time the Vatican has been the place selected.

CONFESSIONAL. An enclosed recess where penitents make confession to the priest.

CONFITEOR. The confession which the priest recites with great humility, saying, "I confess to Almighty God, to blessed Mary ever Virgin, to blessed John the Baptist, to the holy Apostles Peter and Paul, and to all the Saints and to you brethren, that I have sinned exceedingly in thought, word and deed, through my fault, through my fault, through my most grievous fault. Therefore I do beseech the blessed Mary, ever Virgin, the blessed Michael the archangel, the blessed John the Baptist, the holy Apostles Peter and Paul and all the Saints, and you, brethren, to pray to the Lord our God for me."

COPE. A cloak worn during service by Catholic priests. It reaches from the shoulders nearly to the feet and is open only in front, where it is fastened at the neck by a clasp.

CORPORAL. A square of linen the size of a handkerchief, folded in four parts, with a small black cross worked in the centre of its anterior edge. It is spread on the altar at the commencement of mass, the Chalice being placed upon it.

CREED. A summary of Christian belief. The Apostles' Creed is so called because each one is said to have contributed one of its twelve articles.

CROSS, SIGN OF THE. The Greek priest first crosses his thumb on the fourth finger, and bends his little finger so that it resembles the curve of a crescent; the index finger stands erect, and having bent the middle one in the same way as the little, lifts his hand and traces the sign of the Cross. The meaning of this is as follows: The outstretched finger stands for the Greek letter I, the bending of the middle finger for the letter C—an old way of writing Sigma or the English S—the letters I and C or S thus standing for Jesus. The thumb crossed upon the fourth finger is the Greek X, equivalent to our ch, and this with the little finger representing S or C, stands for Christ; so that the interpretation is Jesus Christ. The Roman Catholic sign of the cross is made by touching the forehead, breast, left and right shoulder, the priest saying: "In nomine Patris, et Fil.i, et Spiritus Sancte, Amen"—in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, amen; the last invocation being uttered as the hand passes from the left to the right shoulder.

CROSS, DOUBLE. A cross having at the head two transverse beams differing in length. It is also called Archiepiscopal.

CROSS, JANSENISTIC. A cross in which the Lord's arms are not fully extended, this signifying that He died only for the good.

CROSS, TRIPLE. A cross having three transverse bars.

CRUCIFIX. There are six variations of the cross: 1. The Latin cross most commonly in use, the transverse beam being near the top, ✝ 2. The Greek cross, where two equal beams cut each other in the centre, +. 3. St. Andrew's, the form of cross on which that saint was crucified, ×. 4. The Egyptian, T. 5. The Maltese. 6. The Russian.

CRUETS. The glasses in which the wine and water for the Holy sacrifice are kept. They are generally of glass, but are sometimes gold or silver.

DALMATIC. The garment worn by the deacon in administering the Holy Eucharist, and also worn at stated times by the bishops. It reaches below the knees, and is open at each side for a distance varying at different periods.

DATOR. An officer in the pope's court commissioned by him to receive petitions respecting the provision of benefices. He is empowered, without conferring with the pope, to grant to all benefices that do not produce more than twenty-four ducats yearly, but for the others, he must have the signature of the pope. He can also, where there are several candidates for a benefice, decide on whom it shall be bestowed.

DEDICATION, FEAST OF. The wake or festival for the dedication of churches.

DEIPNON. The mass as being the means of giving to our souls the Bread of Life.

DEO GRATIÆ. "Thanks be to God." An exclamation used at the conclusion of the Epistle, or an expression of gratitude for the sacred words.

DIAPER. In church architecture a decoration of large surfaces with a constant recurring pattern either carved or painted.
Hook's Church Dictionary.

DRIPSTONE. The projecting moulding which crowns doors, windows and other arches in the exterior of a building.
Hook's Church Dictionary.

EAST, PRAYING TOWARDS THE. This is an ancient custom, and in early times most of the churches were built with a view to this practice. A number of reasons are given, of which the most important is this: At the Saviour's crucifixion His face was towards the west, hence by praying turned to the East, is signified looking in His face.

EMBER DAYS. The Wednesday, Friday and Saturday after the first Sunday in Lent, the feast of Whitsunday, the fourteenth of September, and the thirteenth of December, all being fast days. The week in which these days fall is called Ember Week, and the Sunday in December which begins it is always the third Sunday in Advent.

ENTHRONISATION. The placing of a bishop in his stall or on the throne in his cathedral. Hoole's Church Dictionary.

EPIGONATON. A lozenge-shaped appendage hung from the girdle and worn on the right side. It represents the napkin with which our Lord girded himself at the last supper and has either His head or a cross embroidered on it. In the Catholic church, none but the pope is allowed to use it, but in the Greek church permission is granted to all the bishops.

EXARCH. An officer in the Greek church whose business it is to visit the provinces in his charge to acquaint himself with lives and manners of the clergy, the manner of celebrating Divine service, and administering the sacraments, confession in particular; also monastic discipline, affairs of marriage, divorces, etc.

FALDISTORY. Lat. Faldistorium. The bishop's chair near the altar, which he occupies when addressing the candidates for orders. This name is also given to the episcopal chair within the chancel.

FLAGON. A vessel for holding the wine before and at the consecration in the Holy Eucharist. It differs from the chalice in being the vessel in which some of the wine is placed for consecration, if more than one vessel is used.

FONT. The baptismal vase or basin. It supplies the place of rivers, etc., where the rite of Baptism was formerly administered.

FORMULARY. A book containing the ceremonies, rites and forms of the Church. In the Church of England it is the Book of Common Prayer.

FRIDAY, GOOD. The Friday in Passion Week, and so called from the good effects on us of our Lord's sufferings. It was called Long Friday by the Saxons.

GIRDLE. A cincture fastening the alb around the waist. It was formerly broad and flat, but is now a cord with tassels at the ends.

GLORIA IN EXCELSIS. "Glory to God in the highest." As this is a hymn of joy it is not sung during seasons of penance and mourning, consequently is never heard during Lent or Masses for the Dead. It is recited while the Dominicans and Carthusians stand at the centre of the altar, the initial words only being said from that place, the remainder being finished at the missal. At the conclusion thereof the priest stoops and kisses the altar, when he salutes the congregation with "Dominus vobiscum"—"The Lord be with you."

GLORIA PATRI. "Glory be to the Father." The doxology reads, "Glory be to the Father, and to the Son and to the Holy Ghost, &c."

HOST. The altar bread, which is circular in shape and has been since the third century. It is differently stamped, some bearing the letters I. H. S., others a cross, &c. The Greek Host has a square projection rising from the surface which is called the Holy Lamb and cut off, is used for the sacrificial Host. The remainder of the loaf is divided and the particles grouped and dedicated to the Virgin, apostles, saints and martyrs. The Coptic Host has on one side "Αγιος Αγιος, Αγιος, Κυριος Σαβέωθ" Holy, Holy, Holy Lord of Hosts, and on the other side Αγιος Ισχυρος Holy, strong one.

HYMN, ANGELIC. The Doxology beginning, "Glory be to God on high." It is so named from having been sung by the angels when they appeared to the Bethlehem shepherds.

I. H. S. Formerly written I. H. C. The first three letters of the Lord's name in the Greek language IHΣOΥΣ which were often used, during the age of persecution, on the tombs of Christians. The interpretation, Jesus, the Saviour of men, originated with St. Bernardine in 443. He disapproved of devices on some cards which were being sold by a peddler and induced him to change them, substituting the letters I. H. S., which he said stood for Jesus Hominum Salvator.

INQUISITION. A court of justice in Roman Catholic countries for the trial and punishment of heretics.

INTERDICT. An ecclesiastical censure by which the Church of Rome forbids the performance of Divine service and the administration of the sacraments to a kingdom, town, etc.

INTROIT. The beginning of the Mass for the day, principally passages taken from the Psalms, followed by the minor doxology.

INVESTITURE. The act of conferring a bishopric by giving a pastoral staff or ring.

JUBILATE DEO. "O be joyful in God." One of the Psalms used after the second lesson in the morning service.

JUBILEE. A solemn season recurring every quarter of a century in the Church of Rome, marked chiefly by the indulgences granted by the pope to all of his communion.

JURE DIVINO. "By Divine right." An expression frequently found in controversial writings.

KEYS, POWER OF THE. The authority held by the priesthood of administering the discipline of the church and granting or withholding its privileges.

KYRIE ELEISON. 'Lord have mercy on us." The name given to the minor Litany which is recited after the Introits. The only Eastern Liturgy which enjoins its recital on the priest is that of St. James.

LANTERN. The middle tower of a cruciform church when it is open over the cross.

LAURA. A name given to a collection of cells in a wilderness inhabited by monks, each of whom provided for his own wants. Formerly the monasteries in Ireland were called Lauras.

LECTURN. The reading desk placed in the choir of churches. It was generally made of wood, but sometimes of brass, the shape being an eagle with extended wings.

LENT. A movable fast coming in the spring of the year, and lasting from Ash Wednesday to Easter Sunday. It commemorates the fasting of the Saviour for forty days and also his passion, death and resurrection. Lent is observed in the Catholic and some Protestant churches, and Good Friday is, in England and other countries observed by a general suspension of business. In the Greek church the fast of Lent is rigorously observed and there are several repetitions throughout the year.

LITURGIA. Formerly the name most frequently applied to the mass and now in use through the East.

LOGOS. The Word. One of the titles of our Lord. As men make known their sentiments to each other by speech, so God reveals His designs by His Son, the Word.

LYCHNOSCOPE. A narrow window near the ground, generally found at one end of the chancel, but sometimes in other parts of the church. There have been various opinions as to their use, but now they are supposed to have been confessionals.

MANIPLE. A small strip of precious cloth, of the same substance as the Stole and chasuble, on which are embroidered three crosses, one in the middle and one at each end. It is worn on the left wrist and is about two feet long and four inches wide, and when on, hangs equally on both sides. The Greeks wear two, one on each arm, and they are usually called Epimanikia, signifying something worn on the hand.

MASS, MISSA or MISSIO, dismissal. The origin of the word mass is disputed, but the general opinion of Roman Catholic writers is in favor of the above. They relate to the ancient custom of a two fold dismissal—the Catechumens before the Mass and the faithful at the end. The entire service was known by the plurals missæ or missiones.

MASS, BRIDAL OR NUPTIAL. In the Missal is found a Latin "Missa pro Sponso Et Sponsa," i. e., Mass for the Bridegroom and Bride.

MASS, CONVENTUAL. The mass which the rectors and canons attached to a cathedral are required to celebrate each day after the hour of Tierce, which is about nine o'clock.

MASS, DRY. So called when the consecration and consumption of the elements are omitted. Not now in use.

MASS, LOW. The mass repeated in a low tone of voice.

MASS, GOLDEN. MISSA AUREA. Out of use, but formerly celebrated on the Wednesdays of the quarter tenses of Advent in honor of the Mother of God; the bishops and all his canons assisting, at which time it was customary to distribute very costly gifts to those who took part. It was a splendid and Solemn High Mass, often lasting three or four hours. It is celebrated yearly in Brussels, at the Church of St. Gudule, on Dec. 23d.

MASS, MIGNIGHT. Also called Nocturnal. Was frequently celebrated during the persecution of Christians because they were forbidden to meet during the day. It is yet celebrated in many places at Christmas.

MASS OF JUDGMENT. An ancient custom used to prove or disprove the innocence of accused persons; unknown in the church at the present time, and condemned as early as A. D. 592.

MASS OF REQUIEM. A mass said in behalf of the dead.

MASS OF THE PRESANCTIFIED. The mass so called because celebrated with a previously consecrated Host, and without the consecration of either element.

MASS, PRIVATE. The mass when quietly celebrated in some oratory or chapel, not accessible to all.

MASS, SHOES WORN AT. While bishops are not limited as to color, for the lower order of the clergy black is always prescribed.

MASS, SIMPLE HIGH, OR MISSA CANTATA. The mass where there is neither deacon or sub-deacon ministering.

MASS, SOLEMN HIGH. So called when mass is solemnized with deacon and sub-deacon and a full corps of inferior ministers. It is sometimes called grand, because of its ritualistic display. Also high, on account of the greater part of it being chanted in a high tone of voice.

MASS, SOLITARY. Mass said by a priest alone, without the attendance of the people or even a server.

MASS, VOTIVE. Mass said by a priest, either to satisfy his own wishes or some member of his congregation.

MATINS. The ancient name for those prayers offered about day-break.

MISERERE. 1st. The psalm usually selected for penitential acts, being the 51st psalm. 2d. The seat of a stall made to turn up or down, so that it might be used for a seat or in long standing for a support. They are generally carved, and sometimes very handsomely.

MISSAL. Lat. LIBER MISSALES. Book of the mass. The Greeks use eighteen books in the service of the altar.

MONSTRANCE. The large appurtenance in which the Blessed Sacrament is exposed at Benediction; sometimes carried in solemn procession. It has a large stem, the upper part resembling the rays of the sun. In its centre there is a circular aperture in which the lunette with the Blessed Sacrament enclosed is placed during the exposition. The material is the same as that of other vessels. None but the clergy are allowed to touch the sacred vessels.

MYSTERION. The mass of mysteries.

MYSTAGOGIA. The mass, so called by St. Dyonysius from its being a participation of the sacred mysteries.

NAVE. The central portion of a church extending from the choir to the principal entrance.

NIPTER. Lat. PEDILUVIUM. The ceremony of washing the feet. It is performed by Greek Christians on Good Friday, in imitation of our Lord.

PALL. A stiff piece of linen, about five inches square, with a worked cross in the centre. It is used as a cover for the mouth of the chalice.

PARCLOSE. Screens which separate the chapel from the body of the church, especially those at the east end of the aisles.

PARVISE. The room over a church porch. It is used as a private room by some officer of the church, and sometimes as a temporary lodging for a priest.

PATEN. A small saucer-like dish, used to cover the mouth of the chalice, and made of the same material, on which is placed the large bread for consecration.

PATER NOSTER. "Our Father." The Lord's prayer, having this preface: "Being admonished by salutary precepts, and taught by divine institution, we presume to say."

PAX, PEACE. An elaborately ornamented metal tablet used in the mediæval church to receive the kiss of peace by priests and people.

PAX VOBISCUM. "Peace be with you." A form of greeting used in the offices of the ancient Christian church.

PORCH. A part of the church where formerly marriage and baptismal services were partly performed and then completed in the church.

POSTILS. The ancient name for sermons or homilies.

PRIORY. A house occupied by an order of monks or nuns, the chief of whom was called a prior or prioress.

PROSPHORA. The mass so called from the fact that through it we eventually obtain eternal happiness.

PROTHESIS. Also called CREDENCE. It is that place in a church on which the Eucharistic elements are put before being consecrated on the altar.

PULPIT. An elevated desk, generally placed in the nave of the church, from which the preacher addresses his congregation. Formerly sermons were delivered from the steps of the altar.

PURIFICATOR. Also called the Mundatory, is a piece of linen about twenty inches long, and when folded in three, four inches wide. In the centre there is a small cross, and it is kept wrapped in the Amice when not used.

PYX. A small box of gold or silver about the size and shape of a watch. It is used for carrying the Blessed Sacrament to the sick.

RELICS. It is the custom among Roman Catholics of placing some portion of the body of a saint or martyr in newly consecrated altars. The relics are enclosed in a metal box—silver is preferable—and this bears the name of the saint and the bishop who officiates at the ceremony.

REREDOS. A screen behind an altar. In large conventional churches, where there is a space behind the altar, this was the universal termination of the ritual presbytery.

Hook's Church Dictionary.

RITUAL. A book containing the order and forms to be observed in celebrating the Divine service and all matters connected with external order, in the performance of sacred offices.

ROCHET. The garment worn by the bishops under the chimire. It was made of linen, with narrow sleeves.

ROOD LOFT. A gallery extending along the top of the rood screen, which in parish churches generally crosses the chancel arch. On this was placed the rood or figure of our Lord on the Cross, and on either side the Blessed Virgin and St. John. The rood loft in large cross churches was usually of stone and occasionally contained a chapel and an altar.

ROOD SCREEN. That which separates the chancel from the nave and formerly supported the rood loft.

RUBRICS. Rules and orders formerly printed in red characters but now in Italics, directing the time, place and manner in which all things in the Divine service should be performed. The English clergy solemnly pledge themselves to observe these rubrics.

SACRISTAN. The person in whose care are the sacred vestments. The name is now changed to sexton.

SACRISTY. Now called vestry. The place where the sacred vestments are kept.

SANCTE BELL. A small bell which is rung when the "Sanctus, Sanctus, Sanctus, Dominus, Deus Sabaoth" was said, to prepare the people for the elevation of the Host.

Hook's Church Dictionary.

SEDILIA. Seats near to and generally on the south side of the altar for the ministers officiating at the Holy Eucharist, of which there are generally three, the celebrant, epistoler and gospeller, although the number varies from one to five.

SEE. The seat of episcopal dignity and jurisdiction, where the bishop has his throne or cathedra.

Hook's Church Dictionary.

SEPTUM. The enclosure made by the altar rails for the holy table.

SEPULCHRE. A niche usually at the north side of the altar used in the representations of our Lord's burial, resurrection and tomb, on Good Friday, Easter and before the Reformation. It is sometimes quite plain, at others very elaborate. The general subjects are the Roman soldiers sleeping and the angels.

SHRINE. The place of deposit for relics or other sacred things.

SOLIDEO. Lat. Solus and Deus. A tight fitting white cap worn by the pope instead of the berretta. The pope takes this cap off to no earthly person, but to God only, during the more solemn part of the mass.

STOLE. A band of precious cloth four inches wide and six feet long, worn around the neck and crossed on the breast, being kept in place by the cincture. A deacon is privileged to wear the stole from the time of his ordination, but only over the left shoulder and fastened at the right side, the priest wearing it around both and crossed, while the bishop wears it pendant on both sides without crossing. In the Greek Church this is generally known as the Epitrachelion and differs from the others in being made in one piece with a seam worked along the middle, and having an opening at the top wide enough to allow the priest's head to pass through.

STOUP. A basin for holy water generally placed near the entrance of a church, and on the right hand of the one who enters.

SUNDAY, LOW. Upon the octave of the first Sunday after Easter day, it was the custom of the ancients to repeat some part of the solemnity which was used upon Easter day whence this Sunday took the name of Low Sunday, being celebrated as a feast, though of a lower degree than Easter day itself.

Hook's Church Dictionary.

SURCINGLE. A belt used for fastening the cassock around the waist.

SURPLICE. A white linen garment worn by the clergy in celebrating the Divine services and on certain days by members of colleges, whether clerical or not SYNAXIS. The mass so called by the Fathers as being the means of union with Christ.

TABERNACLE. A small structure resembling a church placed in the centre of the altar. It is generally made of wood but sometimes of marble and is then lined with wood, and in it is kept the Holy Eucharist under lock and key.

TARGUM. A book of hymns used by the Nestorians. It is derived from the Syriac word turgmo—interpretation.

TELEION. The mass signifying the perfect atonement made by the sacrifice of the Holy Lamb.

THURIBLE. The vessel in which the incense is burned. This is kept in a small boat-shaped vessel and conveyed to the thurible by means of a small spoon.

TIARA. The pope's triple crown. That and the keys are the badges of his dignity: the tiara of his civil rank, and the keys of his jurisdiction.

TONSURE. The clerical method of wearing the hair. Shaving the top of the head, leaving a rim of hair at the base, signifies wearing a crown of thorns.

TRAVERSE. A seat of state covered with a canopy for the use of the sovereign. It was formerly placed at the upper end of the choir in the royal chapels, and temporarily in cathedrals.

TRIFORIUM. The passage directly over the arches of the great arcade, but also applied to any passage in the walls of a church.

TUNICLE. A garment worn by the minister assisting at the Holy Communion. It has been the same as the dalmatic since the fourth century, before which time it had no sleeves.

VEIL. Made generally of silk, and used to cover the chalice.

VERGER. The one who carries the mace before the canons or dean in a cathedral or collegiate church. In some cathedrals the canons have their vergers, and the dean his, but frequently the verger goes before any member of the church.

VESTMENTS, COLORS OF THE. White, the symbol of purity, innocence and glory is used at the special feasts of our Lord and the Blessed Virgin, and at those of the angels, virgins and confessors. Red, symbolic of fortitude is used at Pentecost and the feasts of the apostles and martyrs and the Lord's Passion. Green, the symbol of hope is used from the octave of the Epiphany to Septuagesima and from the octave of Pentecost to Advent. Violet, the symbol of penitence is used in times of public sorrow, fasting and penance, and in those processions which do not immediately relate to the Blessed Sacrament. Also at the feast of the Holy Innocents, except when it comes on Sunday, when it is changed to red, as is also the color of the octave. Black is used in Masses and Offices of the dead and on Good Friday. In the Greek church there are but two colors, red and white, the latter being the general, while red is used in all masses for the dead and through Lent.

VIRGIN MARY, ANNUNCIATION OF THE BLESSED. A festival appointed by the church for the 25th of March to commemorate the appearance of the angel to Mary with the announcement that she should be the Mother of the Messiah.

WAFERS. The name given to the bread used by the Catholics in the Eucharist, and by the Lutheran Protestants in the Lord's Supper. They are formed to represent a Denarius or penny, the coin for which our Lord was betrayed.

WEEK, HOLY. The last week in Lent in which the church commemorates the sufferings and death of our Lord. It is also called Passion Week and the Great Week.

WEEK, STILL. Also called Holy Week, at which time no bells are rung from Thursday until Saturday when they are rung in memory of our Lord's resurrection.

WHITSUN-DAY. Also called White Sunday. A festival in the church commemorating the descent of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost. It occurs ten days after Holy Thursday or Ascension Day.

ZUCCHETTO. A small, closely fitting skull cap, in shape like a saucer. It can be worn by permission from the pope during Mass from the beginning to the Preface, and from the end of communion to the completion of the service. It is of three colors, red, violet, and black. Red is worn by the cardinals, violet by the patriarchs, archbishops and bishops and black by all the other clergy.

JEWISH CHURCH.

AARON-HAKADISH. The holy ark used in the Synagogue as a depository of the scrolls of the law.

ATONEMENT, DAY OF. Celebrated on the ninth and tenth days of Tishri. It was instituted by Moses, as a general day of expiation and sacrifice for sins.

BENSHEN. A corruption of the Latin word benedicto. The prayer after meals recited by Israelites.

BROCHO. BLESSING. A grace recited before partaking of food.

CHANUKKAH. DEDICATION. A day of celebration on the ninth day of Kisley to rejoice in the victory of the Hasmoneans, or Maccabees over Antiochus, King of Syria.

EPHOD, from Aphad, to put on. An upper garment worn by Hebrew priests. There were two kinds; that worn by the priests, of plain linen, and that by the high priests, of embroidered linen. It was a sort of girdle, which brought from the back of the neck over the shoulders, hung down in front, and was crossed at the waist and carried back and used as a girdle to the tunic.

GEMARA. A commentary on the Mishna.

KADDISH. A prayer recited in the Synagogue for the souls of departed parents.

KELAI KADESH. HOLY VESSELS. Silver ornaments used in the Synagogue to adorn the scrolls of the law.

KETHUBIM. WRITINGS. Containing the Psalms, Proverbs and the remaining books of the Bible.

KIDDUSH and HABDALLA. Prayers recited in Jewish houses; the first at the beginning, the latter at the close of Sabbaths and festivals. They are recited by the chief of the house, holding a glass of wine in his hand, at the conclusion of which he drinks and passes it around the table.

MESUSA. DOORPOST. A little scroll of parchment containing this passage of Scripture: "Thou shalt write them on the doorposts of thy house, and upon thy gates." It is enclosed in a tin box, and fastened to the right doorpost of Jewish houses.

MISHNA. The oral law consisting of traditions handed down respecting the law of Moses.

MONTHS—JEWISH.

Nisan, March 20 to April 16.
Iyar, April 19 to May 17.
Sivan, May 18 to June 16.
Tamuz, June 17 to July 15.
Ab, July 16 to August 14.
Elul, August 16 to September 13.
Tishri, September 14 to October 13.
Marchesvan, October 14 to November 13.
Kisley, November 14 to December 13.
Tebeth, December 14 to January 12.
Shebat, January 13 to February 12.
Adar, February 13 to March 15.

The Jewish months have 29 and 30 days, and Leap year has 13 months, the last being known as 2d Adar.

NEBIM. PROPHETS. Containing that portion of the Bible from the Book of Joshua to the end of the Prophets.

PAROCHES. The curtain before the holy shrine in the Synagogue.

PESACH. PASSOVER. The feast of Spring, beginning on the fourteenth day of the month Nisan and lasting seven days. It is the celebration of the Passover and commemorates the delivery of the Jews from Egyptian bondage, and the passing over of the last plague from the houses of the Israelites.

PHYLACTERY. In Hebrew, tephelin. Strips of parchment on which were inscribed passages from the Pentateuch. They were enclosed in a small box and worn on the forehead between the eyes, or on the arm near the heart, in accordance with the command in Exodus xiii, 16.

PURIM. LOT. A feast day, on the fourteenth of the month Adar, in remembrance of God's providence in saving the Israelites from the destruction, through Mordecai and Esther, planned by Haman, according to the book of Esther.

ROSH HASHANAH. NEW YEAR. Kept on the first day of the seventh month, Tishri, the Jewish civil New Year, Nisan being the religious. The biblical name of the feast is "Day of the Trumpet."

SEPTUAGINT. SEVENTY. The Old Testament, so called, from the number of translators engaged on the original Greek version. It was commenced by the Alexandrian Jews, 280 B. C. There were many disputes as to its correctness, but it was the basis of all subsequent translations.

Shebuoth. Feast of Weeks. A celebration of the completion of the seven weeks of harvest, according to Deut. xvi, 9. At the present time the main object of the feast is to thank God for the giving of the commandments.

Sukkoth. Feast of Tabernacles. It lasts seven days, commencing on the fourteenth day of the seventh month, Tishri, the first day only being a holy day. This is also a harvest feast, and is in obedience to the command in Levit. xxiii, 40: "And ye shall take unto yourselves on the first day the fruit of the tree, hadar, branches of palm trees, and the boughs of the myrtle tree, and willows of the brook, and ye shall rejoice before the Eternal seven days."

Talith, and Arba-canforth. Vestments formerly worn during Divine service, to guard man against trespass and to remind him of his moral and religious obligations. They contained the thread of blue spoken of by Moses, a symbol to direct the eye and heart to God.

Talmud. This book contains the complete civil and canonical law of the Jewish people, embracing both the Mishna and the Gemara, the former being the earliest text. It is a book of doctrine, as the name implies, and this doctrine is elucidated and commented upon in a series of dialogues, in many cases of a fanciful character. The Mishna (doctrine) and the Gemara (teaching) contain, however, many curious and interesting statements regarding legal, medical, physical, ethical and astronomical subjects. They reveal much of the customs, practices, and decisions of the Jewish nation in the ages of antiquity. The word Talmud is from the Hebrew word lamed, and signifies, to learn.

Tefilla. A prayer known as Sh'mona esreth, on account of the eighteen benedictions that it originally contained.

Torah. Law. The five books of Moses, known as the Pentateuch.

RELIGIOUS WORKS.

Analytical Bible Concordance, Revised Edition.

Analytical Concordance to the Bible on an entirely new plan. Containing every word in Alphabetical Order, arranged under its Hebrew or Greek original, with the Literal Meaning of Each, and its Pronunciation. Exhibiting about 311,000 References, marking 30,000 various readings in the New Testament. With the latest information on Biblical Geography and Antiquities. Designed for the simplest reader of the English Bible. By ROBERT YOUNG, LL.D., author of "A New Literal Translation of the Hebrew and Greek Scriptures," etc., etc. Fourth Revised, Authorized Edition. Printed on heavy paper. One large volume, 4to, cloth, $3.65; sheep, $4.40; Fr. imp. morocco, $4.65.

This is the Fourth Revised Edition, containing 2,000 CORRECTIONS not to be found in the American Reprint. It is the only correct edition. It is invaluable to the reader of either the old or the new version of the Bible.

☞Dr. PHILIP SCHAFF verifies these corrections.

AMERICAN BIBLE REVISION COMMITTEE,
42 BIBLE HOUSE, N. Y., June 22, 1881.

Messrs. I. K. Funk & Co.,

DEAR SIRS:—I have at your request examined personally, and had two literary friends examine, the proof slips of corrections of Young's "Analytical Concordance to the Bible," and a comparison of the fourth edition with the first has convinced us that all these corrections have been made in the plates of the fourth edition (1881). Some of these changes are corrections of typographical errors or the errors of copyists; others are the insertions of important references omitted from the first edition. It is no wonder that, in a work covering many thousands of references, there should have appeared in the first edition so many errors and defects; the wonder is rather that there are no more.

I am glad to bear this testimony as an act of justice to Dr. Young, who has spent so many years of self-denying labor upon this work, and has made it by far the most complete Concordance in the English or any other language.

PHILIP SCHAFF.

Spurgeon says: "Cruden's is child's play compared with this gigantic work."

[From the New York Tribune.]

"This is the most important work in religious literature that has been produced for many years. It certainly will supersede and displace all similar works which have preceded it. It is at once a Concordance in Greek, Hebrew and English Lexicon of Bible words and a Scriptural Gazetteer, and will be as valuable to students of the Holy Word as an Unabridged Dictionary is to the general public."

[From John Hall, D.D., New York.]

"Dr. Robert Young's Analytical Concordance is worthy of the lifetime of labor he has spent upon it. I deeply regret that his natural and just expectation of some return from its sale on this side of the ocean is not realized, and I hope the sense of justice to a most painstaking author will lead to the choice, by many purchasers, of the edition which Dr. Young approves—that of Messrs. I. K. FUNK & Co., with whom Dr. Young co-operates in bringing out here the best edition."

Analytical Biblical Treasury.

By ROBERT YOUNG, LL.D., author of Analytical Concordance, etc. 4to, cloth, $4.00.

(4) Bible Themes, Questions, Canonicity, Rationalism, etc., together with maps and plans of Bible lands and places. (5) A complete Hebrew and English Lexicon to the Old Testament. (6) Idiomatic use of the Hebrew and Greek Tenses. (7) A complete Greek and English Lexicon to the New Testament.

Bertram's Homiletic Encyclopædia.

A Homiletic Encyclopædia of Illustrations in Theology and Morals. A Handbook of Practical Divinity, and a Commentary on Holy Scripture. Selected and arranged by Rev R. A. BERTRAM, compiler of "A Dictionary of Poetical Illustrations," etc. Royal 8vo, cloth, 892 pp., $3.75; sheep, $4.25; half morocco, $5.00.

The London Record.—"Its illustrations cast daylight upon more than 4,000 texts of Scripture. A treasury of practical religion."

C. H. Spurgeon.—"....A very valuable compilation—a golden treasury—an important addition to a minister's library."

The London Literary World.—"No book of illustrations....that, for fullness, freshness, and, above all, suggestiveness, is worthy to be compared with the work."

Edinburgh Review.—"Nothing can be more serviceable to students."

Companion to the Revised Version of the New Testament.

Explaining the Reason for the changes made on the Authorized Version. By Alex. Roberts, D.D., member of the English Revision Committee, with supplement by a member of the American Committee. Also a full Textual Index. Authorized edition. 8vo, paper, 117 pp., 25 cents; 16mo, cloth, 213 pp., 75 cents.

Charles F. Deems, D.D., says: "The Companion to the Revised Version seems to me almost indispensable. It is important to know the spirit which animated, and the rules which directed, the labors of the Revisers, as well as the critical reasons which determined certain important emendations. All this is set forth by Dr. Roberts with admirable perspicuity. I shall urge every member of the church of which I am pastor to give it a careful reading, and purpose to introduce it as a Text Book in our Bible-classes."

The New York Examiner and Chronicle says: "It is very valuable, giving needed facts as to the causes of the differences of reading which have sprung up in the Scriptures, and the grounds upon which the changes in the present Revised Version have been made."

Conant's History of English Bible Translation.

Revised and Brought down to the Present Time by Thomas J. Conant, D.D., member of the Old Testament Revision Committee, and Translator for the American Bible Union Edition of the Scriptures. This History was originally written by Mrs. H C. Conant, the late wife of Dr. T. J. Conant. It is a complete history of Bible Revision from the Wickliffe Bible to the Revised Version. 2 vols., paper, 284 pp. (Standard Series, octavo, Nos. 65 and 66), 50 cents; 1 vol., 8vo, cloth, $1.00.

Eastern Proverbs and Emblems.

Illustrated Old Truths—selected from over 1,000 volumes, some very rare, and to be consulted only in libraries in India, Russia and other parts of the Continent, or in the British Museum. All are classified under subjects, enabling teachers and preachers to fix in the school, the pulpit, or the press, great spiritual truths by means of emblems and illustrations drawn from the depths of the popular mind. This book is the opening of a rich storehouse of emblems and proverbs By Rev. A. Long, member of the Bengal Asiatic Society. 8vo, 280 pages. Price, cloth, $1.00.

Fulton's Replies.

Punishment of Sin Eternal. Three sermons in reply to Beecher, Farrar and Ingersoll. By JUSTIN D. FULTON, D.D. 8vo, paper, 10 cents.

Gilead: An Allegory.

Gilead; or, The Vision of All Souls' Hospital. An Allegory By Rev. J. HYATT SMITH, Congressman from New York. Revised edition. 12mo, cloth, 350 pp., $1.00.

The Boston Traveller says:—"Of all the attempts at Allegory, but three are worthy of mention: Spenser's 'Faerie Queen,' Bunyan's 'Pilgrim's Progress,' and J. Hyatt Smith's 'Gilead.' J. Hyatt Smith is worthy to be so classed, and ought to be proud to fall in such good company."

The Buffalo Courier says:—"The same rich imaginative glow suffuses his written as well as his unwritten thought."

The Philadelphia Christian Chronicle says:—"It is an allegory of rare power and completeness, and unless we greatly mistake the public taste, it can hardly fail of a large and well-deserved favor with the people."

Godet's Commentary on Luke.

A Commentary on the Gospel of St. Luke. By F. GODET, Doctor and Professor of Theology, Neufchatel. Translated from the Second French Edition. With Preface and Notes by John Hall, D.D. New edition, printed on heavy paper. 2 vols., paper, 584 pp. (Standard Series, octavo, Nos. 51 and 52), $2.00; 1 vol., 8vo, cloth, $2.50.

Howard Crosby, D.D., LL.D., says:—"I consider Godet a man of soundest learning and purest orthodoxy. His Luke would be a most acceptable publication in the form you suggest."

Wm. M. Taylor, D.D., says: "I consider Godet an admirable commentator for clearness and suggestiveness."

Lyman Abbott, D.D., editor Christian Union, says: "Godet's Commentary combines the critical and the spiritual, perhaps more effectually than any other with which I am acquainted."

The Congregationalist, Boston, says: "A book of richest and most permanent value to aid in studying Sabbath-school lessons—clear, thorough, critical, suggestive, inspiring."

The Sunday School Times, Pa., says: "Godet's Commentary is one for which Christian scholars should everywhere be grateful. It is full and refreshing."

The Advance, Chicago, Ill., says: "Prof. Godet is abundantly learned, thoroughly devout and sound. His style is fresh and often highly suggestive."

The Central Christian Advocate, St. Louis, Mo., says: "In Godet we find the highest critical skill and a devout spirit. We can commend it without reserve to teachers and students."

The Zion's Herald, Boston, Mass., says: "As a commentator, Godet is eminently clear, orthodox and suggestive. He meets all the destructive criticism of the hour upon the sacred text and its authenticity, with a firmness of conviction and fullness of learning which are refreshing, while in exegetical and homiletical notes he leaves nothing to be desired."

Gospel of Mark.

From the Teachers' Edition of the Revised New Testament, with Harmony of the Gospels, List of Lessons, Maps, etc. Paper, 15 cents; Cloth, 50 cents.

Home Altar.

The Home Altar: An Appeal in Behalf of Family Worship. With Prayers and Hymns for Family Use. By Rev. CHARLES F. DEEMS, LL.D., pastor of the Church of the Strangers. Third edition. 12mo, cloth, 281 pp., 75 cents.

Bishop McTyeire says: "This little volume we have read again and again, and cannot speak too well of it. There will be hardly any need of preaching on family prayers where it circulates."

Rev. Dr. Summers says: "It seems impossible to read it, and continue delinquent in regard to the duty in question. The prayers are all catholic and scriptural."

Rev. W. H. Hunter, Pittsburgh, says: "The appeal contained in it for family worship is the most powerful and persuasive we have ever read, and, it seems to us, must be irresistible."

Rev. Dr. Crooks says: "It is one of the ablest essays on the subject we have ever read."

Rev. Dr. Wellons says: "The argument in favor of family worship is perfectly irresistible."

Murphy's Commentary.

A Critical and Exegetical Commentary on the Book of Exodus. With a New Translation By JAMES G. MURPHY, D.D. New edition, unabridged. With preface and Notes by JOHN HALL, D.D. 2 vols., 8vo, paper, 233 pp., $1.00; 1 vol., cloth, $1.50.

"Thus far nothing has appeared for half-a-century on the Pentateuch so valuable as the present volume (on Exodus). His style is lucid, animated, and often eloquent. His pages afford golden suggestions and key-thoughts..... Some of the laws of interpretation are stated with so fresh and natural a clearness and force that they will permanently stand."—Methodist Quarterly.

"As a critical, analytical, candid, and sensible view of the Sacred Word, this work stands among the first."—Congregational Quarterly.

Popery.

Popery the Foe of the Church and of the Republic. By Rev. JOSEPH S. VAN DYKE, author of "Through the Prison to the Throne," etc. 8vo, cloth, 304 pp., $1.00.

The Rev. Alexander T. McGill, D.D., Professor in the Theological Seminary, Princeton, New Jersey, says: "I most earnestly commend it as an effort of great merit, diligence and skillful array of the facts which are of such fearful moment to the Church and to the country at this hour. This book will do great good in awakening the apathy, and engaging a more earnest inquiry among Protestant people respecting the insidious, busy, and baleful advances of this anti-Christian power."

The Rev. Joseph T. Duryea, D.D., Pastor of Central Congregational Church, Boston, Mass., says: "I have read with interest and profit the work entitled, 'Popery the Foe,' etc. It is an excellent summary of principles and facts bearing upon the controversy with the Papal Church. The arrangements and appeals are sound and strong. It is a timely contribution to the cause of true religion and civil liberty."

The Rev. M. C. Sutphen, D.D., says: "Eminently able and timely. It will go like fire, and I hope will be a part of the 'brightness of that coming' which will destroy the 'man of sin.'"

These Sayings of Mine.

"These Sayings of Mine." Pulpit Notes on Seven Chapters of the First Gospel. By JOSEPH PARKER, D.D. With an introduction by Dr. Deems. 8vo, cloth, 320 pp., $1.50.

Dr. Holme in HOM. MONTHLY says: "We especially congratulate ourselves that these sermons are printed essentially as they were delivered; they have not been retouched nor polished; they are here just as they fell on the ears of the masses who listened to them at their delivery, in their native roughness and brokenness. Dr. Parker always has a clear apprehension of the point he would make, and he 'makes' directly at it with the boldness and dash of a soldier when storming a fort. We think we would select Dr. Parker to lead a storming party rather than Mr. Spurgeon; he has more enthusiasm, and imparts more to his followers at a given charge than the other great London preacher. Seeming to forget all rules, Dr. Parker rushes forward with resistless energy, and thrusts the bayonet point of truth right into the heart of his antagonist."

The London Christian World Pulpit says: "We have no hesitation in describing these 'expositions,' for such they really are, as most luminous in their interpretation of the Divine sayings. They glow with holy fire, and they are inspirational alike to intellect, conscience and heart. It is pre-eminently a book for preachers. We pity the Christian who is not stimulated and helped by this volume, placed so easily within the reach of all. The volume has interested us beyond measure at times; it has thrilled us with vital convictions of truth, and, at the last page, like 'Oliver Twist,' we want more."

The Boston Congregationalist says: "They are exceedingly stirring sermons in the best sense. . . . They rouse the reader to take fresh courage and make sturdier efforts in Christ's name. . . . The prayers which accompany them are remarkable for tenderness and power."

The St. Louis Presbyterian says: "The reader will find much to delight, much to instruct, much to edify."

The Syracuse Northern Christian Advocate says: "For richness, originality and vividness of thought, and for force of expression, these sermons are not surpassed by any in the English language."

Through the Prison to the Throne.

Through the Prison to the Throne. Illustrations of Life from the Biography of Joseph. By REV. JOSEPH S. VAN DYKE, author of "Popery the Foe of the Church and of the Republic." 16mo, cloth, 254 pp., $1.00.

The Treasury of David.

By Rev. CHARLES H. SPURGEON. 8vo, Cloth. Price per volume, $2.00.

Spurgeon's Authorization.—"Messrs. I. K. Funk & Co. have entered into an arrangement with me to reprint THE TREASURY OF DAVID in the United States. I have every confidence in them that they will issue it correctly and worthily. It has been the great literary work of my life, and I trust it will be as kindly received in America as in England. I wish for Messrs. Funk success in a venture which must involve a great risk and much outlay. "C. H. SPURGEON."
Dec. 8, 1881.

DATE OF ISSUE.—Volume I., issued February 28th; Volume II., April 28th, and one volume about every two months thereafter.

Philip Schaff, D.D., the Eminent Commentator and the President of the American Bible Revision Committee, says: "The most important and practical work of the age on the Psalter is 'The Treasury of David,' by Charles H. Spurgeon. It is full of the force and genius of this celebrated preacher, and rich in selections from the entire range of literature."

William M. Taylor, D.D., New York, says: "In the exposition of the heart 'THE TREASURY OF DAVID' is sui generis, rich in experience and pre-eminently devotional. The exposition is always fresh. To the preacher it is especially suggestive."

John Hall, D.D., New York, says: "There are two questions that must interest every expositor of the Divine Word. What does a particular passage mean, and to what use is it to be applied in public teaching? In the department of the latter Mr. Spurgeon's great work on the Psalms is without an equal. Eminently practical in his own teaching, he has collected in these volumes the best thoughts of the best minds on the Psalter, and especially of that great body loosely grouped together as the Puritan divines. I am heartily glad that by arrangements, satisfactory to all concerned, the Messrs. Funk & Co. are about to bring this great work within the reach of ministers everywhere, as the English edition is necessarily expensive. I wish the highest success to the enterprise."

William Ormiston, D.D., New York, says: "I consider 'THE TREASURY OF DAVID' a work of surpassing excellence, of inestimable value to every student of the Psalter. It will prove a standard work on the Psalms for all time. The instructive introductions, the racy original expositions, the numerous quaint illustrations gathered from wide and varied fields, and the suggestive sermonic hints, render the volumes invaluable to all preachers, and indispensable to every minister's library. All who delight in reading the Psalms—and what Christian does not?—will prize this work. It is a rich cyclopædia of the literature of these ancient odes."

Theo. L. Cuyler, D.D., Brooklyn, says: "I have used Mr. Spurgeon's 'TREASURY OF DAVID' for three years, and found it worthy of its name. Whoso goeth in there will find 'rich spoils.' At both my visits to Mr. S. he spoke with much enthusiasm of this undertaking as one of his favorite methods of enriching himself and others."

Jesse B. Thomas, D.D., Brooklyn, says: "I have the highest conception of the sterling worth of all Mr. Spurgeon's publications, and I incline to regard his 'TREASURY OF DAVID' as having received more of his loving labor than any other. I regard its publication at a lower price as a great service to American Bible Students."

W. H. Van Doren, D.D., the Author of the "Suggestive Commentary," says: "A life work of the Prince of Preachers. No minister of the Church of Christ for 1800 years has drawn and held such a number of hearers so long. If the secret of his power is here revealed, it will be a TREASURY, priceless in value, for centuries to come."

Rev Henry Ward Beecher says: "Whatever comes from Spurgeon is presumptively good."

Van Doren's Commentary.

A Suggestive Commentary on Luke, with Critical and Homiletical Notes. By W. H. VAN DOREN, D.D. Edited by Prof. James Kernaban, London. 4 vols., paper, 1104 pp. (Standard Series, octavo, Nos. 54–57), $3.00; 2 vols., 8vo, cloth, $3.75.

Spurgeon says: "It teems and swarms with homiletic hints."

Canon Ryle says: "It supplies an astonishing amount of thought and criticism."

Bishop Cheeny says: "I know of no volume in my library I could not consent to spare sooner."

Dr. Cheever says: "It is the best multum in parvo I have ever seen."

MISCELLANEOUS WORKS.

Bulwer's Novels.

Leila; or, The Siege of Granada; and, The Coming Race; or, The New Utopia. By EDWARD BULWER, Lord Lytton. 12mo, leatherette, 284 pp., 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Carlyle's Sartor Resartus.

Sartor Resartus; The Life and Opinions of Herr Teufelsdröckh. By THOMAS CARLYLE. Paper, 176 pp. (Standard Series, octavo, No. 60), 25 cents; 8vo, cloth, 60 cents.

Dr. John Lord says: "Every page is stamped with genius. It shows pictures of the struggle of the soul which are wonderful."

Appleton's Encyclopædia, 1860 edition, "Carlyle," page 443, says: "In the course of the year 1833–4, he published in Fraser's the most peculiar and remarkable of all his works—the quaint, the whimsical, the profound, the humorous, and the poetic 'Sartor Resartus,' into which he seems to have poured all the treasures of his mind and heart. Under the eccentric guise of a vagabond German philosopher, and on the homely topic of the philosophy of clothes, he has brought together much of the deepest speculation, the finest poetry, the noblest morals, and the wildest humor that his or any age has produced."

The Baptist Review says of his book: "You find passages brimful of humor, scathing in their sarcasm, crystalline in their simplicity, tearful in their pathos, splendid in their beauty. You meet a freshness like that of a spring morning, a suggestiveness that is electric to the soul."

YOUNG'S "BIBLE TREASURY."

This wonderfully condensed and valuable Thesaurus is the result of the most painstaking investigations by one of the ripest scholars in Great Britain—DR. ROBERT YOUNG, the author of "Young's Analytical Concordance."

Its contents are—

I.—An Analytical Survey of all the BOOKS of the Bible.

II.—An Analytical Survey of all the FACTS of the Bible.

III.—An Analytical Survey of the IDIOMS of the Bible.

IV.—Themes, Criticisms, Canonicity, Notes, Queries, etc.

V.—A Hebrew and English Lexicon to the Old Testament.

VI.—The Idiomatic Use of the Hebrew and Greek Tenses.

VII.—A Greek and English Lexicon to the New Testament.

For fuller description of each of these seven divisions, see January Number.

This is an immensely valuable work to the Bible student.

This edition omits the maps and fac-similes of ancient MSS., but contains the twenty-three engravings and all the letter press, unabridged, of the English edition, is printed on much heavier paper and is of superior binding.

Price, postage free, American Edition, Cloth Bound, $2.00.

DR. PHILIP SCHAFF VERIFIES THESE CORRECTIONS.

AMERICAN BIBLE REVISION COMMITTEE,
42 Bible House, N. Y., June 22, 1881.

Messrs. I. K. Funk & Co.

Dear Sir:—I have at your request examined personally myself, and had two literary friends examine, the proof slips of corrections of Young's "Analytical Concordance to the Bible," and a comparison of the fourth edition with the first has convinced us that all these corrections have been made in the plates of the fourth edition (1881). Some of these changes are corrections of typographical errors, or the errors of copyists; others are the insertions of important references omitted from the first edition. It is no wonder that, in a work covering many thousands of references, there should have appeared in the first edition so many errors and defects; the wonder is rather that there are no more.

I am glad to bear this testimony as an act of justice to Dr. Young, who has spent so many years of self-denying labor upon this work, and has made it by far the most complete Concordance in the English or any other language.

PHILIP SCHAFF.

THE PRACTICAL CYCLOPÆDIA OF QUOTATIONS.

17,000 Quotations—50,000 Lines of Concordance.

A MOST VALUABLE REFERENCE BOOK.

What Representative Men Say:

Hon. Samuel J. Randall, Ex-Speaker of the House of Representatives, writes from Washington under date of January 7:

"Enclosed find check for copy of 'Cyclopædia of Quotations.' I am much pleased with it. I consider it the best book of quotations which I have seen."

Hon. Abram S. Hewitt, M. C., writes:—

"In relation to the 'Cyclopædia of Quotations,' I desire to express my sincere thanks to you and to the authors of this admirable publication. The labor bestowed must have been immense, and the result is a work indispensable to authors, scholars and speakers. The completeness of the indices is simply astonishing; and altogether the design is so well executed as to leave nothing to be desired on the part of those who may have occasion to find or verify a quotation. And who is there who has not such need?"

New York, Jan. 3, 1882.

Mr. Jas. E. Harvey, Private Secretary of Vice-President Davis, writes:—

"At the request of Judge Davis, I have examined the plan of the 'Cyclopædia of Quotations,' and have practically tested its merits by reference to original authorities. It is admirably organized and fills a void long felt by professional and public men, and even by those engaged in literature. Such painstaking and precise work as this book exhibits on every page, fairly entitles it to large success."

Vice-President's Chamber, Washington, Jan. 4, 1882.

Maj.-Gen. George B. McClellan writes:—

"It is the most perfect work of the kind I have yet met with, and I confidently recommend it as a book that should be in every private and public library."

Hon. Geo. F. Edmunds, U. S. Senator, writes:—

"An inspection of your 'Cyclopædia of Quotations' satisfies me that it is the most complete and best work of the kind with which I am acquainted. The arrangement and classification are admirable, and the book constitutes a rich treasury of gems gathered from many fields of literature. It deserves a place on every library table."

Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C., Jan. 5, 1882.

Henry W. Longfellow writes from Boston:—

"I shall often read and enjoy this 'Cyclopædia of Quotations.' I am glad to see that it is so thoroughly furnished with indexes of authors and subjects. It can hardly fail to be a very successful and favorite volume."

George William Curtis writes:—

"I congratulate the authors and publishers on the happy completion of a work which must have cost a great deal of labor. It is a handsome volume. * * Am sure to find it a most serviceable companion."

Noah Porter, D.D., LL.D., President of Yale College, writes:—

"I shall value the book for its own worth, and am confident it will be a help and pleasure to many."

Gen. Winfield S. Hancock writes:—

"It is a work carefully and intelligently compiled, and of great practical use."

Governor's Island, New York Harbor, Jan. 6, 1882.

Gen. Stuart L. Woodford writes:—

"It seems to me the most complete and accurate work of the kind I have ever seen. Such a book is almost invaluable."

Office of the U. S. Attorney, New York, Jan. 6, 1882.

Oliver Wendell Holmes writes from Boston, Mass.:

"It is a very handsome and immensely laborious work; has cost years to make it. * * I shall let it lie near my open dictionaries. * * It is a massive and teeming volume."

Wendell Phillips writes:

"It seems to contain almost everything one can need, or wish, of fine and striking and valuable thought in English and other tongues. * * It is of rare value to the scholar, and to those who have not had an opportunity to become such."

Howard Crosby, D.D., LL.D., writes:—

"A most valuable adjunct to the reading-table and writing-desk. It is elaborately and judiciously prepared."

George Washington Childs, Editor of the Philadelphia Ledger, writes:

"I send you $20.00 for your 'Cyclopædia of Quotations.'" He also encloses a notice of the work from his paper from which we quote: "This is unique among books of quotations. . . . It is impossible to give a full idea of this rich store-house, except to say that any one who dips into it will at once make a place for it among his well-chosen books."

Hon. Rev. J. Hyatt Smith, Member of Congress, writes:

"It is a monument of labor and taste. . . . The book has the first place in my library this side the Bible and Cruden."

Hon. Frederick T. Frelinghuysen, Secretary of State, Washington, writes:

"The authors have overcome the difficulties in the way of producing a book of useful and interesting reference which goes over new ground in a new way. Am much pleased with it."

J. H. Rylance, D.D., writes Jan. 13th.; "I have carefully looked through and tested the 'Cyclopædia of Practical Quotations' as a book of reference, and am thankful to have found it so thoroughly reliable. It is the best bit of work of the kind that I know. It will henceforth be to me a friend always at hand. Such helps are increasingly needed as the treasures of literature grow, and as the demands upon a man's time multiply."

What the Press in America say:

From New York "Herald," Jan. 2.— "This is by long odds the best book of quotations in existence, and it may for usefulness be placed beside such works of patient labor as Mary Cowden Clarke's Concordance to Shakespeare. Indeed, it is the much more meritorious as a labor, in that it needed a thorough ransacking of the authors using the English language for the finding of its material, although many compilers had broken the ground. The joint authors, J. K. Hoyt and Anna L. Ward, are Americans, and Mr. Hoyt is a journalist. We offer them our congratulations on the taste, research and ingenuity they have displayed. The general idea of a book of quotations is that it is an easy means for the unlearned to put on the varnish of erudition; for the pretentious to keep up their priggishness; for the writer with poverty of wit to set the gems of genius in his work. Another aspect of its use is that its gems of speech, if fairly set, are always welcome. There is a difference, too, between robbing the cradle and the grave of literature for phrases between quotation marks, and acknowledging by them that what has been so well said cannot be bettered in form by the writer or speaker. It may, however, be frankly admitted that much quotation is vanity or affectation. A book like the one we have been perusing is nevertheless distinctly valuable in furnishing the man with a phrase floating in his mind the exact language of the phrase. It is not pretended by the authors that every quotable phrase in the language has been culled, but a pretty thorough overhauling of its contents has shown that without being perfect in this respect it is wonderfully full. The headings are generally well chosen, though occasionally a cross reference to kindred headings would have been an advantage. The list of authors is formidable, and the numerical strength of selections from them fairly represents their standing. To the concordance of English quotations, we give our warmest approval. There, indeed, will be found the work's greatest usefulness to the man of letters. The greatest care has been taken in the indexing, and all quotations are not only properly credited to the author, but the line, scene or stanza, and the title of the work, play or poem quoted from, are given. The book is a large, well-printed octavo of 900 pages, and will at once take its place in well-regulated libraries. At first we were inclined to resent the term, 'practical quotations,' and we are not yet reconciled to it, but practicability is the essence of the book's construction, and we only wish it had instead been called 'a practical cyclopædia of quotations.'"

From the Daily "Journal of Commerce," New York: "Messrs. I. K. Funk & Co. have sent us an advance copy of their 'Cyclopædia of Practical Quotations, English and Latin, with a Copious Appendix.' The work has been compiled by Mr. J. K. Hoyt, who was for many years managing editor of that excellent newspaper, the Newark Daily Advertiser, and Miss Anna L. Ward, said to be a lady of taste and culture. Such a compilation cannot fail to be highly useful. Those who, like ourselves, have spent weary days in hunting for familiar quotations, will heartily appreciate the work, calculated, as it is, to abbreviate such wearisome labors; while those who wish a pleasant companion for a leisure hour will find ample entertainment in its crowded pages. It has a very copious index, on which a vast amount of work has been expended to render the contents of the book available at once to the busy student. It is a whole library in itself, and those whose means will not allow them to accumulate many books, or who have not time to consult them in detail, will find this condensed summary of so many notable things worthy of record, a most valuable treasure."

From the Boston "Globe," Jan. 8.

"One of the most valuable books of the time is the comprehensive 'Cyclopædia of Practical Quotations,' by J. K. Hoyt and Anna L. Ward, and published in attractive style by the New York firm of I. K. Funk & Co. There are over 17,000 quotations, including many not included in previous compilations, and unusual care has been shown in making them strictly accurate, as well as in giving the authorship, where that was ascertainable. An admirable system of classification has been adopted, there being nearly a thousand subject-heads; and by the full concordance, which forms such a valuable feature of this book, every one of these quotations is made readily available. The subdivisions of the Cyclopædia will commend themselves to every reader. Special mention seems to be called for regarding such characteristic features of this book as the collection of nearly 2,000 quotations from the Latin, the list of proverbs and familiar sayings in French, German, Italian and other modern languages; the department of Latin law terms, which is particularly valuable; and a biographical dictionary of the names of the 1,200 authors quoted in this work. In all respects the Cyclopædia, with its 900 pages, is worthy to be accounted as one of the great publications of the day. A monument of industry and well-directed work, marked by thorough system, this 'Cyclopædia of Practical Quotations' must at once take its place among the few really standard books—a volume indispensable to the man of letters, and one which should be in the library of every reader."

From the "Christian Union," New York: "The 'Cyclopædia of Practical Quotations,' prepared by J. K. Hoyt and Anna L. Ward, and published by I. K. Funk & Co., will prove a valuable publication. To any person who has ever needed its aid the ordinary dictionary of quotations is a grief of heart and a vexation. What you want you never can find, and what you do not want is perpetually presenting itself. Moreover, such collections are usually ill-digested and worse edited, and of no earthly good when you call upon them. We can except from this verdict Mr. Ramage's 'Beautiful Thoughts' series; but these are too fine to be popular. What the people want, and what the student and the professional man and the literary man all want, is a working cyclopædia—and here it is, at last.

"Opening the pages at random, we strike the gloomy, but important, topic, 'Death,' and discover fourteen columns given to this alone, and the authors' names arranged alphabetically; while each quotation on the double-columned octavo pages is distinguished by an italic letter for the sake of easy reference. Some departments, such as 'Trees,' 'Flowers,' 'Birds,' 'Occupations,' 'Months,' 'Seasons,' etc., have also sub-heads, and quotations are classified, for greater convenience, under them. In things like these there is hardly an improvement to be suggested. It is quite the same, too, when we observe the character and scope of the Latin extracts, of which there are in the neighborhood of two thousand, including law and ecclesiastical terms, proverbs and mottoes. But the highest praise we can bestow we are ready to give to the 'concordance' by which the English quotations are rendered available.

"If we descended to a certain small and hypercritical style of investigation we could probably find a few faults, such as the authors themselves will probably discover and correct in a later edition. No great work is free from occasional blemishes, and we have observed some ourselves, which we might certainly take the liberty to note. But such a vast piece of labor, involving both skill and judgment, and covering more than nine hundred pages, invites and even challenges a broad and fair discussion of its merits and defects. The former are all summed up, to our mind, in two words: convenience and usefulness. It nearly supersedes Mrs. Cowden Clarke's 'Concordance to Shakespeare' for practical utility. And the compilations of Allibone (over which we have often grown wrathy enough) and Bartlett (which it drains to the dregs) are quite out of competition.

"On the whole, we rejoice over this book. We shall no longer beat over half of creation for an elusive quotation. We shall be greatly preserved from a desire to employ what Bishop Coxe happily styled 'an appropriate form of words by which Christian people might suitably express themselves on occasions of great spiritual provocation.' If we misquote the bishop's language ourselves, we do it unintentionally, and we know he will set us right. He might, perhaps, furnish a certified copy for the second edition of the 'Cyclopædia.'

"It remains that we should add that in this heavy undertaking Messrs. Funk & Co. have shown good typographical taste and judgment, and have put the book on excellent paper, and in a durable and neat binding, and offer it at a moderate price. The defects which a smaller style of criticism may discover will doubtless be promptly remedied, but for the scope and usefulness of the work itself we have most hearty and unqualified approbation. Especially, too, because our American authors are so largely represented."

From the Daily "Times," New York:

"If this new competitor with the established books of quotations had no better feature to recommend it, the elaboration of its index would place it before others of the kind. The main index is, in fact, a concordance, and occupies more than two hundred large octavo pages of close print. It is followed by a concordance to the English translations of the Latin quotations, the list of which is very large. The Latin quotations have their own index. There are also topical indexes for the English and the Latin subjects; an alphabetical register of the authors quoted; a list of ecclesiastical terms and definitions; another of Latin law terms and phrases in common use; a compilation of Latin, French, Spanish, Portuguese and other proverbs and mottoes. Under the title of 'Unclassified Quotations' are ranged many short sayings of noted authors in the order of their initial letters. Naturally enough, the very purpose for which such books are compiled is defeated if the reader cannot turn readily to the quotation wanted. Half the use of cyclopædias of quotations comes from the need of some work of reference which shall render exactly the floating memory of the phrase. Some little clue is lurking in the mind, the general bearing of the desired sentence is known but the conscientious quoter wants to quote rightly or not at all. Hence the value of indexing after this fashion, where it needs only a slight clue to lead the eye to the desired quotation. Moreover, when found this compilation gives a further clue to the whereabouts of the context, which may, after all, be the object in view. An editor's claim that the grouping of certain prominent objects, like those under 'Birds,' 'Flowers' or 'Trees,' is novel. 'Not a line,' they assert, has been knowingly added merely to expand the book. The elaborate indexes are secondary to the general alphabetical plan on which the subjects are arranged, and under each subject the quotations stand alphabetically, according to the name of the author. An ingenious system of small letters indicates the quarter of the double-columned page in which the quotation stands."

From the Boston "Post," Jan. 10.

"The entire reading public, but more especially the great army of students and literary workers, will hail this volume with undisguised satisfaction, for it is a boon to them that they have time out of mind longed for in vain. * * * Is a monument of industry, research and learning. * * * The book is indexed in the most superior manner, both according to topics and by a concordance to the English quotations. The magnitude of the work which has been done in the compilation of this cyclopædia impresses one at the very outset, and the authors have every reason to be proud of what they have jointly accomplished. Mr. Hoyt is a trained journalist, having been managing editor of the Newark Daily Advertiser for many years, and the arrangement of the book and all its methods show a thorough understanding of the needs of those for whom it is intended. Miss Ward is said to be a lady of exceptionally fine culture and literary taste, and of this the work gives good evidence. For convenience and usefulness the work cannot, to our mind, be surpassed, and it must long remain the standard among its kind, ranking side by side with, and being equally indispensable in every well-ordered library, as Worcester's or Webster's dictionary, Roget's Thesaurus, and Crabb's Synonyms.
